ELY DECLARES WAR ON TERRORISTS

According to solemn agreement, made between "gallant allies," which the British called themselves and us, the United States should receive from Great Britain next Saturday the sum of three hundred and sixty million dollars. Another considerable sum on account of "war debts of honor" is due from France. Will these amounts be paid to maintain, spotless, the honor of nations that borrowed, in their troubles?

They will not be paid, nothing will be paid. Three hundred and sixty millions of dollars are more important than "spotless honor."

To the announcement that she would pay nothing, Great Britain frankly adds that "it would be useless, and therefore unwise," even to attempt negotiations.

Little Finland, on the contrary, announces her intention to pay the Saturday instalment. Napoleon called England "a nation of shopkeepers," which annoyed the English, and was inaccurate. Shopkeepers make it a habit to pay their debts in order to keep their credit.

M'CORMACK OUT FOR LEADER

By Associated Press

Washington, Dec. 12—Representative McCormack (D.-Mass.) formally announced today his candidacy for Democratic floor leader of the House.

An hour later Representative John E. Rankin of Mississippi withdrew from the race for speakership of the House and announced his candidacy for the floor leadership.

This entrenched Representative Joseph W. Byrns of Tennessee in the lead for the speakership.

The Democrats will meet in caucus on January 2 to select speaker and floor leader to be elected the following day.

FIRE SWEEPS DAVIS SQUARE THEATER

Fire swept E. M. Loew's Davis Square Theater in Day street, Somerville, today, an hour before it was scheduled to open.

Three alarms were sounded, calling help from Cambridge and Arlington. Damage was estimated at $10,000.

Deputy Fire Chief Horace Hutchins, Jr., declared that defective wiring, resulting in a short circuit over the motion picture projection booth, caused the flames.

Because the theater is owned by the same interests controlling those bombed at Lynn and Pawtucket earlier in the day, it was at first suspected the fire might have been incendiary.

Hutchins said the blaze was definitely of accidental origin and that a deliberate crossing of the wires could only have been accomplished by boring a hole in the roof or ceiling. There was no such hole.

The flames were burning for about an hour and a half before they were discovered. They ate along a section of the balcony and burst through the roof.

Firemen felt some alarm over the proximity of a garage and a photographic supply house containing highly inflammable materials but the flames were confined to the motion picture house after a stubborn half-hour fight.

Traffic in the congested Davis Square business district was tied up for an hour.

YULE MAIL TO HIT NEW HIGH

Christmas mail is running three and four times greater this year than the normal flow of business.

Postmaster William E. Hurley late today said the Yuletide business would be 10 or more per cent greater than any other time in the long history of the Boston post-office.

Expectations are that the 60,000,000 letters and packages which comprise last Christmas' record-breaking total, will be surpassed this season.

FingerGone But Not His Record

What's a finger where a school attendance record is concerned?

That, today, was literally the attitude of 12-year-old Walter Geratowski, of Light street, Lynn, a pupil in the Breed Junior High School there.

The third finger of his left hand was almost severed by a "jointer" machine in the manual training class room. At the hospital the digit was amputated.

The operation completed, Walter insisted on returning to school He wanted no absence to mar his record.

ROOSEVELT IN DRIVE ON WAR PROFITEERS

By Associated Press

Washington, Dec. 12—Enactment of legislation to take the profit out of war is planned for this session of Congress by President Roosevelt.

He made known today at his semi-weekly press conference that he had called a meeting for this afternoon to discuss a program with Bernard Baruch, World War chairman of the War Industries Board; General Hugh S. Johnson former NRA administrator and Baruch's war time assistant, and high government officials.

MacARTHUR TO STAY

At the same time, the President directed that General Douglas MacArthur be reappointed temporarily as army chief of staff to aid in formulating the legislation.

President Roosevelt emphasized he hoped a war never would come again and that he was taking up the question now because he said there was no war cloud on the horizon.

In addition to the financial side, Mr. Roosevelt wants to give deeper consideration to the personnel phase and the economic angles.

He believes that as a result of the hurried organization of the government for the World War, maladjustments resulted which had a deep bearing on American life in the post-war period.

For instance, Mr. Roosevelt said there were overproduction, enormous personal profits and a complete lack of co-ordination in the economic system.

DEMAND FOR BONUS

He called to attention that boys who fought in the trenches got $1 a day, while boys who worked in munitions factories received $8 and $10 a day.

Thus the demand for the bonus arose, he said. Others who will meet with the President include Secretaries Hull, Morgenthau, Dern, Swanson, Perkins and Wallace, Assistant Secretary Roosevelt of the navy, General MacArthur, Joseph B. Eastman, railway co-ordinator, and George Peek, foreign trade advisor.

It's Time to Call Halt, Governor Asserts

Governor Ely issued the following statement on the bomb outrages:

GOV. JOSEPH B. ELY

"The facts seem conclusive that the Tremont and Majestic Theaters in Boston, and the Capitol Theaters in Lynn and Pawtucket suffered damages at approximately the same time early this morning. Such a situation cannot be a coincidence. These explosions must have been planned. It is not particularly important at the present moment to determine a motive. Whatever it was, the attempts to destroy those theaters are acts of criminal and willful violence which can be attributed to no other reasoning than that attempts were made in some instances, successfully, to accomplish their own ends by unlawful means.

"Men who would so conduct themselves are not entitled to be recognized in any sense of the word as American citizens. They are clearly antagonistic to the principles of American government, seeking by striking terror to the hearts of those who manage theaters, and the general public, to accomplish the ends which they believe cannot be accomplished by any legal process.

"This is the sort of thing which grows out of too much countenance by the agencies of government in ultra-radical ideas, in which these same agencies do not believe. In our endeavor to rout out of our economic and industrial life evils that have grown into it, certain individuals in this country, apparently unaware of the consequences of their utterances, open the door to the most radical designs against American institutions.

"It is time to call a halt. I call upon all the law enforcing agencies of this state to scour this Commonwealth for the apprehension of the terrorists who seek to destroy, through fear, the sane processes of government.

"I call upon the public as they value their institutions, their lives, their happiness, to report to local authorities any information which may lead to the arrest of these enemies of society.

"No reward is offered. If the responsibility of American citizenship is not sufficient to cause persons having information valuable to the police in unraveling these crimes to report that information, then it is useless to expect it by the payment of money."

La Paz, Bolivia, Dec. 12 (AP)—The Ministry of War announced today that a Paraguayan plane had been shot down in flames by Bolivian fliers after a 15-minute fight at Capirenda.

THEATER BOMBINGS LAID TO REDS

Bombers spread terror in New England today by blowing up four theaters almost simultaneously—the Majestic and Tremont in Boston and the Capitol theaters in Lynn and Pawtucket, R. I.

Governor Ely, in a resultant proclamation, declared a state of war on terrorists:

"It is time to call a halt. I call upon all law enforcement agencies to scour this Commonwealth for the terrorists who seek to destroy, through fear, the sane processes of government."

Police ascribed the outrages to labor troubles or Communists, perhaps the two combined in a widespread plot of destruction.

Heavy damage resulted to the Tremont and Majestic, famous Tremont street playhouses, and to movie houses made bomb targets at the same time in Lynn and Pawtucket.

Four persons were slightly injured by the Boston explosions, which rocked the downtown section. Had there been audiences in the theaters at the time, an appalling loss of life must have resulted.

Five other Boston theaters controlled by the same interests were placed under police guard. They are the Columbia and the Gaiety on Washington street; the National on Tremont street near Arlington Square; the Ideal on Dudley street, Roxbury, and the Dorchester on Park street, Dorchester.

◆ A telephone warning to police that the Hotel Bradford was marked for bombing resulted in a police guard being posted in the lobby but the management later asked its withdrawal, stating there was no reason to expect trouble.

Police guards were posted at theaters in various other sections of New England.

Six hours after the bombings a police raided a house in Gold street, South Boston, arrested a 62-year-old woman and her son as suspects and seized 1500 revolver cartridges of various calibre. It was thought cartridges might have been emptied of their powder to construct bombs.

Communist literature and a picture of Lenin were found in the house. The suspects were taken to headquarters.

Another trail led Detectives Benjamin Goodman and William Goulston of the "Red" squad to Providence.

Police expressed the opinion that dynamite, nitroglycerine or gunpowder was the explosive agency used in the bombs.

At the Majestic they found a

Taxi Man Tells Eye-Witness Tale of Blast

Here is an eye-witness story of the bombing of the Tremont Theater, as given to the Boston Evening American by Edward Latterner, 26, of 25 East End avenue. Mr. Latterner is a cab driver.

By EDWARD LATTERNER

"I was looking directly at the Tremont Theater when the explosion occurred.

"I was parked almost across the street in my cab, and was watching for possible customers. A man, who had been standing at the entrance to the theater caught my eye.

"He looked undecided as to what he was going to do, looking intently first one way, and then another, on Tremont street. He seemed a likely prospect for a fare, so I kept my eye on him.

"While I was watching him, he

LABOR OPENS UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE LAW DRIVE

CONNERY PUSHES BATTLE FOR 30-HOUR WEEK

By Associated Press

Washington, Dec. 12—Union labor's legislative drive for 1935 opened today with a proposal by William Green that unemployment insurance be financed wholly by a 5 per cent tax on payrolls.

Opposing any direct levy on workers, the president of the American Federation of Labor said they would pay most of the cost anyway. Employers add their cost to prices and employes buy 85 per cent of all goods, he said. If workers shared the direct cost of insurance, he added, they would be paying twice.

The labor chief made his proposals in a message to all A. F. of L. unions.

Congressional supporters of another measure that has A. F. of L. backing—the 30-hour week—prepared to attempt to pass it quickly in the next Congress, though high officials in the Roosevelt administration have shown signs of opposition.

Chairman William P. Connery (D., Mass.), of the House labor committee has reported to colleagues that sentiment for the measure as a means of reducing unemployment is growing. Backing Connery is Senator Black (D. Ala.), co-author of the measure which was side-tracked in 1933.

Advocates, Connery said, are interested in giving "employers their just due, while at the same time giving to workers a fair share of the products of their labor in the form of decent living conditions."

Meantime agitation for some form of government protection against the vicissitudes of old age gained momentum within and outside the administration today.

New indications that old age pensions would be debated by the next Congress whether President Roosevelt recommends it or not, were seen.

Representative Keller said that popular demand for a national old age pension law "is so widespread and so intense that there seems little room to doubt the passage of such a law."

He announced he would offer a bill under which monthly pensions of $30 would be paid jointly by the states and the federal government to eligible persons 65 years of age and over.

16 RESCUED ON CRIPPLED BOAT

After a 15-hour fight against mountainous seas and a 30-mile gale, Captain Thor Magnusson and crew of 15 of the steam trawler Winthrop were rescued in a state of exhaustion by coast guards today 150 miles off Boston Lightship.

Last night, their engines crippled by the cold on Georges Bank, Captain Magnusson sent out an SOS. The Coast Guard cutter Cayuga left the Navy Yard under forced draft and raced to her assistance.

Meanwhile, mountainous seas swept the small craft from bow to stern. As dawn was breaking this morning, the cutter arrived and after a terrific fight to get a line aboard, took the craft in tow.

Trawler Adrift

The trawler Winthrop, owned by R. O'Brien & Co. of Boston encountered engine trouble while 150 miles southeast of Boston light. A coast guard patrol boat went to her aid in response to calls for assistance.

Boston Man Tells of Hotel Fire Horror

By International News Service

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 12—The family of Fred H. Nixon of 137 Peterboro street, Boston, owe their lives to the refusal of his small son to sleep alone in a room of the Kerns Hotel, Nixon disclosed today.

Nixon, his wife, Isabella, and their three children, Edward, 7; Roy, 4, and Dorothy, 6, were among those who escaped unharmed in the hotel fire tragedy that took the lives of from 23 to 40 persons yesterday.

They checked in at the ill-fated hotel at 8:30 p. m. Monday. Twelve hours later the old building was to be a smoking pyre, concealing the bodies of scores of guests trapped in its smoke-filled corridors.

"I can give you two adjoining rooms on the fourth floor," said the clerk to Nixon. "That's the best I can do."

"All right," said Nixon, and led his family toward the elevator. "The kids can sleep in one room and we'll take the other."

But four-year-old Roy balked. He refused to enter the elevator. His shrill cries rang through the lobby.

"Don't wanna sleep alone!" he shouted. "Don't wanna sleep alone!"

His father's explanations did no good. Embarrassed and angry, Nixon gave up and returned to the desk.

"You see how it is," he told the clerk, returning his room key.

The clerk didn't mind. Four other travelers were waiting to sign the death-warrant register for that room on the fourth floor.

The Nixon family went to the Hotel Wentworth, a smaller establishment adjoining the Kerns.

"Shortly before dawn," Nixon said, "I was awakened by faint moaning. Red flickering light filled the room. I thought the cries were those of children playing in the street. I opened the window and a puff of smoke poured in.

"I thought our hotel was afire and awakened my wife and children. When we got downstairs the fire engines were beginning to arrive.

"Then I heard the cries again. They were like somebody fiddling on a one-string violin. Rising and falling over the crackle of the fire the people inside were calling: 'Help! Help! Help!', all in the same high-pitched tone. I'll never forget it as long as I live.

"As we got on the other side of the building, we could see people hanging from window sills. One man jumped from a third story window and his legs crumpled under him like paper. Another fell on his head. I was glad the kids were half asleep and couldn't see them. Then we caught a cab and went to another hotel."

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 12—As fire-blackened, ice-covered ruins of the Hotel Kerns began giving up their dead today state police announced that 23 persons had been listed as victims of the flames that trapped the sleeping guests yesterday morning.

The roster of known dead included those whose bodies were taken from the Grand river, into which many terrified guests plunged; those who leaped to the street, dying of injuries, and those definitely reported by relatives to have spent the night in the hotel and said to be missing now.

Five bodies were taken this morning from the still smoking ruins of the hotel, but none had been identified. One apparently died in the lobby. The other two, found close together, evidently had occupied the same room.

Mother, 2 Girls Overcome by Gas, Saved

Mrs. Josephine Gocicero, 30, of 512 East 8th street, South Boston, and her two children, Mary, 8, and Margaret, 12, accidentally were overcome today in their apartment from escaping gas fumes.

Neighbors noticed a strong odor of gas coming from the Gocicero flat. They entered the house finding Mrs. Gocicero and her two children unconscious.

Investigation found a slightly opened gas jet in the kitchen.

A call was sent to the Carney Hospital and an ambulance, accompanied by Doctor Irving Cutler, was sent.

Doctor Cutler revived the unconscious trio and ordered them to the hospital where they are recovering

JEWELS TAKEN IN HOLDUP

Norwich, Ct., Dec. 12—Two unmasked bandits forced three men, including a minister, to lie on the floor face downward today during a jewelry store holdup, and fled with diamonds valued by the owner at $4000, $400 cash and a $472 check.

The robbers, armed with sawed-off shotguns, cleaned out the cases and vault in the Franklin street store of Lee Clegg and, police were told, fled in an automobile with New York license plates.

Clegg and his clerk, A. C. Brian and the Rev. Percy A. Kilmister, pastor of First Baptist Church, who had entered the store, were forced to lie on the floor during the robbery.

MAN SAYS WIFE TOLD OF LOVE FOR ANOTHER

William C. Peters, of Park drive, Back Bay, testified in divorce court today that while he was in a hospital, crippled by arthritis, his attractive young wife and a man he identified as "F. R." told him of their mutual love.

In Suffolk probate court, on grounds of alleged cruelty and desertion, Peters is suing Mrs. Rena E. Peters, now of Arlington street. She is contesting the suit and denies the allegation.

They were married in 1922. Peters earned $8000 a year as a railway supply house vice-president before his illness.

He told Judge Frederick J. Dillon that in 1928, after returning from Florida with his wife, he entered a hospital for incurables. He said:

"Mrs. Peters came to see me with a man named F. R., and the man said, 'Bill, I'm in love with Rena.' I asked Rena what he was talking about, and she said that it was true.

"She said, 'Well, you're nearly all through, and this looks like an opportunity for me.' She said she would like to slap me because I wouldn't agree to letting her go."

In 1930, Peters said, he visited his wife at an apartment and that a man sat with his arms around her while he faced them:

"After he left I remonstrated with her and she told me she was going to do just as she wished. 'I'm so disgusted with you that I could choke you,' she said to me."

Although they occupied the same premises in Boston and Centerville following the hospital incident in 1928, they did not live as man and wife, Peters said.

Cold Spell on Way Out After New Record

The mercury started a long-delayed upward climb today, after it had set one more record at 1 a. m., when the official reading showed six degrees above zero in Boston, making it the coldest December 12 since the weather bureau was founded in 1872.

After that hour figures were well above those of the past few days, and the weather man said the back of the cold spell was broken.

Meanwhile, Miami, Fla., was reporting a record low of 30, forcing closing of the schools there. Snow flurries were reported at Nantucket and at Northfield, Vt.

Some low temperatures early this morning around Boston were Lincoln, zero; Bedford, zero; Lexington, 2 below; Concord, 2 below; Arlington, 3 below.

Cold? Heat Fells Paraguay Troops

Buenos Aires, Dec. 12—While the United States shivered in a bitter cold wave, South American countries were experiencing their first taste today of this summer's intense heat.

Paraguayan and Bolivian troops in the Chaco boreal suffered acutely. The Bolivian defense ministry announced that 160 Paraguayan soldiers in one regiment collapsed from sunstroke.

Florida Cold Hits Record Low of 30

Miami, Fla., Dec. 12—The Miami weather bureau reported an all-time December low here at 7:15 a. m. today with a reading of 30.4.

Richard W. Gray, federal meteorologist, said the lowest previously recorded temperature for December, since opening of the bureau in 1895, was 32. At the airport station 14 miles from the city, the mercury fell to 28.5.

Children enjoyed an unexpected, but shivering, holiday, as Superintendent of Public Instruction Charles M. Fisher ordered closing of all buildings except two at Miami Beach with steam heat installations.

WALLACE URGES UNRESTRICTED PRODUCTION

Washington, Dec. 12—Secretary Wallace, in his annual report, today summarized the agricultural situation as follows:

"Adjusting production downward, when demand falls is . . . the compulso course."

True prosperity cannot be had "by creating domestic shortages or continuously restricting production."

"Adjustment of farm production under federal guidance involves not regimentation but merely social discipline."

"Only by creating more employment in agriculture and in industry or in both can we remove the need for economic controls."

"We must enlarge our idea of democracy, or risk losing what democracy we have . . . The farm program looks toward an economic democracy . . . in harmony with our political democracy.

"We wish to retain our foreign market (for cotton); and this means we must continue to supply it at moderate prices. But, we do not wish to keep prices ruinously low . . .

"Had wheat acreage not been curtailed by the acreage reduction, the 1934 crop would have been somewhat larger; but the growers would have been worse off."

"The emergency (corn-hog) program forwarded production adjustment . . . By conserving feed, it mitigated the excessive influence of the drouth upon hog production.

"The dairy industry has more production capacity than the market requires."

"The tobacco program increased the market receipts from the 1933 crop by approximately $50,000,000" in addition to benefit payments.

"It is necessary to transform the emergency program into a more permanent policy. . . . We must move from emergency adjustments to long-time planning."

OPERATION TO RISK DEATH TODAY

Today, as her father and mother wait anxiously outside the operating room, 17-year-old Gertrude V. Beaven of Charlestown, former student at Oak Grove Seminary in Portland, Me., is scheduled to undergo a dangerous mastoid operation at Massachusetts Women's Hospital.

Since she contracted a pain in her right ear last February while attending the Portland girls' school—a pain which a Boston ear specialist later diagnosed as a mastoid—she has had three operations and has suffered constantly.

Yesterday, in the federal court of Portland, suit for $10,000 was brought against the school by Miss Beaven, through her attorney, Edward W. Bancroft of Boston, for alleged loss of her beauty and impairment of her health. At the same time, her father sued the school for $5000 for medical and hospital expenses.

Last night, Mr. Beaven, employe of the Charlestown Five Cent Savings Bank, had difficulty concentrating on the details of the suits. His concern right now, he con-

NOTABLES ATTEND LUNCHEON IN HONOR OF FAMOUS EDITOR

By International News Service

New York, Dec. 12—Arthur Brisbane, famous editor and author of the widely read column, "Today," was the guest of honor today at a luncheon marking his 70th birthday and the 50th anniversary of his becoming an editor.

Leaders in public affairs, finance, business, transportation, communications and publishing gathered at the Hotel Warwick for the luncheon. Joseph V. Connolly, president of International News Service and Universal Service, presided and read a batch of congratulatory messages to Brisbane.

Arthur Brisbane

Pres. Roosevelt

President Roosevelt sent a message in which he congratulated Brisbane on the merit of his writings, his clarity of style and ability to transfer his thoughts into printed words.

Among the messages was one from William Randolph Hearst.

President Roosevelt's message was as follows:

"News has come to me that on Wednesday, December 12, of this year, you celebrate the seventieth anniversary of your birth and that you recently celebrated your fiftieth anniversary as an editor.

"This is momentous news.

"It is so momentous that I am moved to comment and to congratulate.

"Your writings, in my judgment, always have been marked with merit, not that I have agreed with you at all times, but because I always have been an admirer of things simply and clearly put. You have simplified the interpretation of news for many millions of people, and I make the statement, with little fear of contradiction, that none of these millions was ever at a loss to understand exactly what you meant when you transferred your thoughts into printed words."

Other Messages

Other congratulatory messages read at the luncheon came from such personages as David Lloyd George, war-time premier of England; Lord Beaverbrook, publisher, London Daily Express; Viscount Rothermere, publisher, London Daily Mail; Ralph D. Blumenfeld, chairman London Daily Express; Major John Jacob Astor, chairman, London Times; Aylmer Vallance, editor, London News Chronicle; Italo Balbo, former Italian air minister, now governor-general of Tripoli-Libya; Aldo Borelli, editor of the leading Italian daily, Corriere Della Sera of Milan; Sir Roderick Jones, chairman Reuter's Agency, London; James A. Farley, postmaster-general; Harold L. Ickes, secretary of the interior; Henry Morgenthau, Jr., secretary of the treasury; Bernard Rickatson-Hatt, editor-in-chief, Reuter's Agency, and Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture.

Tributes also came from men and women in all walks of life, readers of Brisbane's writings for years. These and the other congratulatory messages will be bound in a volume and presented to Brisbane.

Mr. Hearst's message was as follows:

"Of course Mr. Brisbane is not seventy years old.

"That would make me a centenarian.

"But, however old the young man is, I congratulate him on his great talents and what is more important on the great good he has accomplished for his fellows during his brief span of life.

Ripe Old Age

"I sincerely hope that he will reach a really ripe and revered age toward the close of this century and that with increasing knowledge and wisdom and enthusiasm he will do even greater work in the world.

"We must not expect too much of a kid but certainly expect a lot of the young man when he grows up.

"With these few words of encouragement and with much friendship and affection I hail his birthday."

Among those present at the luncheon were Merlin B. Aylesworth, president, National Broadcasting Company; William Paley, president, Columbia Broadcasting System; Bernard Gimbel, Edward A. Filene, Boston; Charles M. Schwab, Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, Joseph H. Appel, John Wanamaker's; Hiram Percy Maxim, Walter Gifford, A. T. and T.; C. S. Gibbs, president, Postal Telegraph Company; A. W. Robertson, chairman, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company; Rear Admiral Yates Sterling, J. M. Davis, president of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad; Major-General Dennis Nolan and T. J. Dillon, editor of the Minneapolis Tribune.

To the distinguished men who gathered to pay him tribute and to the millions who listened in on his radio address, it was Mr. Brisbane's birthday and golden editorial anniversary.

Just Another Day

To Mr. Brisbane it was just another day of work.

"I get up eight hours after I go to bed, I work until I am tired, and I go to work again. Sundays I get exercise: I ride horses."

That is his description of his days.

He slept six hours last night in his home near Allaire, N. J., rose at 7:30 a. m., ate lightly—he always eats lightly—read newspapers on the train, dictated editorials and letters to a machine as his car took him from the station t ohis office in the Daily Mirror buildings.

During the morning telephoned congratulations from friends were the only deviation from his daily routine, which is occupied with the composition of the eight "today" columns a week which are read by a total daily audience of 30,000,000 persons; a Sunday editorial page and book review; seven columns of editorials a week for the Nek York Daily Mirror, and occasional magazine articles.

Farm Interests

He can allocate only a part of his day to editorial work, for he has large business and agricultural interests. In New Jersey he has 7000 acres, in California 5000 acres, in Florida 5000 acres. In California he raises alfalfa, and sells it for $8 to $12 a ton baled; in New Jersey he has to pay $45 a ton for alfalfa to feed the horses which he raises on his New Jersey farm for profit. This is his farm problem.

In New Jersey he also raised sheep, largely Southdowns. Roast mutton is his favorite dish. He drinks "the good red bordeaux," diluted as the French do.

He likes blue suits and soft collars, and dislikes dressing up. Work is his only hobby. He reads in his spare time—mostly old things.

Good News for Bald! Best Dressed on Parade

GREY HAIRED MEN ALSO LEAD IN REVIEW FOR EXTRA JOBS

By International News Service

Hollywood, Dec. 12—Here's good news for the man whose hair is beginning to desert him.

A review today had revealed a majority of the best dressed men in Hollywood are either bald, or grey, or both.

The review was made at a theater here when 250 male extras—the 250 selected from more than a thousand to get the designation as dress extras—parade before motion picture stars, costume designers, directors, and just the garden-run of silver screen fans.

This review of the dress extras was staged by the Central Casting Bureau before a group of 12 judges to select the Class A dress extras who will receive from $15 to $25 per day.

Of course, there were young men among the 250 males, who appeared in long-tailed coats, white vests and ties, patent leather shoes, top hats and opera cloaks, but they represented only about 30 per cent of the group.

As the event got under way the master of ceremonies announced that the "best dressed men and most beautiful women" of Hollywood would show off the wearing of fine clothes as if "to the manner born."

The review of the males also revealed that goatees, beards and moustaches, of all styles and descriptions, are part of the equipment of the well-dressed man of moviedom.

And as for the ladies, who for years have worried about their figures the parade also gave them solace.

A vast majority of these "most beautiful women" of Hollywood showed the audiences figures of the Mae West hour-glass type. There was a decided trend toward plumpness manifest.

The decision of the judges as to the 50 couples who win the Class A rating will not be announced for some time.

ROMANCE CAUSES ROW

Story romance in a work-a-day section of Harvard University was unfolded today in East Cambridge court, netting a Cambridge woman probation on a charge of disturbing the peace and delay of a finding, until next June, on a charge of attempting to extort.

The woman, Miss Anne Daley, 43, of Arnold circle, Cambridge, was haled into court on complaint of John J. Phelan, 40, of Baldwin street, Cambridge, general repair man at Harvard for the last 15 years.

Phelan's principal witness was Miss Ethel Clough, 37, of Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, hostess at the Leverett House at Harvard.

Miss Clough testified Miss Daley pulled up behind a car in which she was parked with Phelan last September and that Miss Daley demanded $200 of Phelan.

Phelan admitted he had kept company with Miss Daley for about a year. He added that sometime after he had ceased to keep company, Miss Daley came to him and made a demand for $200. He said she threatened to see that he lost his job unless the money was forthcoming. Several brushes, before the alleged one described by Miss Clough, occurred at intervals later, he said.

Woman Claims Attack on Ride

Elmer F. Scott of Chapel street, Braintree, today went on trial before Judge Nelson P. Brown and a jury in Norfolk Superior Court, Dedham, charged with attacking Mrs. Elsie L. Saben, 36, of Pond street, Avon.

The woman testified she was waiting for a bus to take her to work in Brockton, when the man offered her a ride. He took her to the grounds of the Brockton Gun Club, she said, explaining that he was a gun club inspector and had to stop there on his way into town.

There, shec laims, he attacked her despite her struggles.

OVER 3 MILLION RISE SHOWN IN '34 REPORT

New York, Dec. 12—Increasing evidence that many large industrial and business organizations are showing definite gain in revenues for 1934 over 1933 is to be found in annual reports covering the past fiscal year, now being made public.

Many of America's industrial leaders have hopes for further expansion and additional revenue gains.

General J. G. Harbord, Chairman of the Board of Radio Corporation of America, said:

"The net income of the Radio Corporation of America, in the first nine months of 1934, was $2,177,770, as compared to a loss of $1,793,370 in the similar period in 1933.

"Our company, like many others, continued expansion of services and improvement of products. Among the many advances was the establishment of a domestic radiotelegraph system, connecting several of the larger cities of the United States, and marked improvement in broadcast receiving sets that have brought a quick response from the public. One of the most encouraging things for the future is that so many individual organizations in America are now in a position to show results, if economic conditions give them a chance."

LIVINGSTON IN SURPRISE TALK TO OFFICERS

Uniformed policemen with girls, draining glasses of strong spirits while on duty or lolling in radio cars to smoke pipes and cigarettes, are all too common in the Back Bay district, if complaints received by Deputy Superintendent William Livingston are to be believed.

Livingston surprised the officers and men of Station 16 by dropping in for the 7:45 roll call this morning. With about 100 men assembled, he told them that he wanted no more of these complaints.

However, Livingston made it plain that these things—if they are going on—must cease.

2 MAYORS LOSE, 1 WINNER IN ELECTIONS

Two former Massachusetts mayors staged comebacks and a third held to his post, final returns from yesterday's elections revealed today.

In two other cities, close contests were waged for minor offices in the absence of mayoralty contests.

The comebacks were at the expense of incumbents, for Mayor William Johnson defeating Mayor Archie Pratt 4293 to 2978 at "orth Adams, and former Mayor James A. Torrey winning over Mayor Paul S. Eaton, who ran third in the contest.

Melrose voters returned Mayor Robert A. Perkins by a vote of 4268 to 1848 over Ralph D. Washburn. Former Alderman Alfred J Campbell ran third with 948 votes.

The Melrose contest for four Aledermen-at-Large brought a tie for fourth place between Walter W. Bruce and Frederick P. Wyman with 2818 votes each. The others elected were former Mayor Albert M. Tibbets, Theodore P. Hollis and Russell B. Hall.

Dr. Warren L. Adams led the five elected to the school committee. The others were Dr. Ralph B. Leonard, present chairman; Denning L. Wentworth, Geoffrey G Felt and Mrs. Maude M. Johnson Mrs. Johnson is confined to her home due to an auto accident.

Newton and Lawrence held the off-year elections.

Probably the biggest surprise in the Newton election was the triumph of Alfred J. Guzzi, Levi Warren junior high school janitor, in the aldermanic election in Ward 3.

CAPT. KILLEN, NORTON CLASH

A police captain and a city councillor today called each other names because a "town character" had been arrested for drunkenness.

The clash came between City Councillor Clement A. Norton of Hyde Park and Captain Metthew J. Killen, just transferred from the Hyde Park to the Charlestown police station, at a session of the Boston Licensing Board.

Norton appeared on behalf of John F. Brennan, near whose restaurant in Harvard avenue, Hyde Park, a "town character" was arrested on November 23.

Brennan's place is a proper one, the councillor said and added that he was disgusted with "the stubborness and vindictiveness" of the police in seeking to close the place.

Killen, on the other hand, declared that Brennan had sold beer to the man after he was already intoxicated, and said that it was high time that the "mayor of Hyde Park" realize that it had been annexed to Boston some time ago.

Kate Kent, Film "Mother," Killed

Hollywood, Dec. 12—Mrs. Kate Kent, 70-year-old screen "mother" and character actress, was killed last night by an automobile as she was crossing a street in a blinding rain squall.

Although her name never appeared on the main title of a motion picture, Mrs. Kent was as familiar to film people as any of the most renowned stars. She is survived by a son, Ted Kent.

attempts are made to discourage murder.

President Roosevelt takes the lead here, summoning all forces of the nation, state, national and local to fight private crime, banditry, traffic in narcotics, lynchings, kidnaping, plain ordinary murder.

Private crime worries us here.

Across the ocean the League of Nations exhorts all Europe to fight "terrorism," the kind of murder that attacks public characters, as in the recent instance of King Alexander, Louis Barthou, the French statesman, and the more recent murder in Russia of Stalin's valued assistant, Kirov.

Europe's murderers kill for political reasons. Political hatred overcomes fear of death, of which Bacon truly remarks, "Revenge triumphs over death; love slights it; honor aspireth to it; grief flieth to it."

In this more practical land, men kill, rob and kidnap for profit. They are not indifferent to death.

A sufficiently large graveyard of criminals with fresh new mounds would do much to discourage the American crime industry.

Ladies with dark hair, finding blond hairs on their husband's coats, and vice versa, appear in divorce cases, complaining.

A Philadelphia lady, daughter of a Venezuelan secretary of state, has something more substantial than a yellow or black hair to offer the court. When her husband, returning from an all night party, undressed, his distressed wife perceived "tooth marks on his shoulder." She knew she could identify the lady whose teeth would fit those marks. The case was further complicated by the indignant statement that the "tooth marks" are marks of guilty affection on the part of the lady whose teeth would fit the bites. There is a moving picture plot, or something, in that news story.

A lady from Berlin with the long name Baroness Eloisa De Bosquet Von Wagner Wehrborn, tired of civilization, sailed away to the Galapagos Islands, where, free from civilized restraints, clothes included if she chose, she associated on terms of superiority with various men. Two of them, at intervals, some times two or three times a week, fought for her favors "with hands, clubs and rocks." They had no modern weapons.

As they fought, "the European noblewoman stood by and goaded them on." Finally, one man, beaten too often, yielded the prize to his rival. The latter and the baroness thereupon sailed away to another Galapagos island. It is a strange mixture of the old cave days and the modern "owl and pussycat" that went to sea in a beautiful pea-green boat.

Two life convicts have earned freedom by submitting to medical experiment with "tuberculosis vaccine," or preventive. The "preventive" with which the doctors have experimented on Carl Ericson and Mike Schmidt for months past is not a tuberculosis cure. It prevents those inocculated from contracting tuberculosis, as ordinary vaccination prevents contracting smallpox.

Doctors of the National Jewish Hospital, who have worked on the new serum for 15 years past, warned the convicts that they would risk their lives in the experiment, now proved successful.

Both chose loss of life with possible recovery of liberty as the reward. Both, serving life terms, will be freed.

End of Bitter Cold in Sight

The end of New England's bitter cold is in sight, according to the weather bureau. Although there will be a probable drop in temperature today, the mercury will start rising before tomorrow, the forecast said.

Boston temperature was officially recorded at 9 above for its low point today, several degrees above the low readings for the past four days.

The weather will be clear, with northwest winds prevailing, according to the forecast.

Rites on Friday for James Halpin

Funeral services will be held at 9 o'clock Friday morning for Commander James Anthony Halpin, 44, chief of the medical service at Chelsea Naval Hospital, at St. Aidan's church, Freeman and Pleasant streets, Brookline.

Commander Halpin died suddenly yesterday. Burial will be in the National Cemetery at Arlington, Washington, D. C.

Auto Deaths Mount

A jump of approximately 75 per cent in motor vehicle fatalities during the first 11 months of this year was experienced by 12 cities and 19 towns of this state, according to a report published by the governor's committee on street and highway safety.

Plymouth Trust Pays

More than $207,000 will be distributed to the depositors of the closed Plymouth Trust Company to bring the dividends from the savings department of the Brockton bank up to 80 per cent. The checks will be mailed to the 21,000 depositors about January 10, it was announced.

Santosuosso Gains

The recount of votes in 72 of Boston's 367 precincts gave Dr. Joseph Santosuosso, defeated Democratic candidate for Secretary of State, a net gain of 53 votes. A similar recount in Fall River netted Frederick W. Cook, successful candidate for re-election on the Republican ticket 80 additional votes.

Town Funds Held Up

Appropriations made at the Braintree town meeting of November 9 have been declared invalid by Judge Abraham E. Pinanski of Suffolk Superior Court on the grounds that the town finance committee did not have time to sufficiently consider the proposed expenditures as required by law.

WIDE SPLIT IN OPINIONS ON BRUNO'S GUILT

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

(Copyright, 1934, by International News Service.)

Flemington, N. J., Dec. 12—Bruno Richard Hauptmann — reiterating his "I am innocent" contention in the face of incriminating evidence —continues to be an enigmatic figure.

Today, some three months after his arrest with a $20 Lindbergh ransom bill in his possession, he is as adamant as ever that he wasn't the man who went up the ladder at the Lindbergh home at Hopewell, N. J., on the night of March 1, 1932, seized little Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., from his crib and subsequently killed the baby whose body was found weeks later in the brush not far from a New Jersey highway.

On Jan. 2 Hauptmann will be the lone defendant answering in the Hunterdon County court to the charge that he murdered the Lindbergh baby.

Hauptmann is being closely guarded in his cell in the county jail here. He was arrested in New York on Sept. 19 and put up a losing fight against extradition to New Jersey.

He has lost some weight during his incarceration in the Flemington jail. But he remains the same cold-eyed, steel-nerved, poker-faced individual who mystified the authorities from the moment of his arrest.

STILL DENIES GUILT

Hauptmann still claims he is innocent and that he has no knowledge of the kidnaping of the baby.

He has been visited many times in the jail here by his loyal wife, Anna, and their year-old son, Mannfried, and also by the chief counsel for the defense, Edward J. Reilly, a veteran of 1000 homicide cases. Hauptmann released James M. Fawcett, the attorney who defended him during the extradition proceedings in New York, and took over Reilly as his new chief counsel. He and Reilly have gone over defense plans quite thoroughly.

Nearly everybody was convinced that the State of New York had an "airtight" extortion case against Hauptmann. But there is a sharp difference of opinion as to whether the State of New Jersey has a surefire murder case against the defendant. New Jersey, however, insists that it has.

DOUBT N. J. EVIDENCE

Ask the average man or woman for an opinion of Hauptmann and the average answer at this writing is something like this:

"I think he is guilty in the sense of having been in on the getting of the Lindbergh ransom money, but as for the actual kidnaping and killing of the baby—well, I don't know whether I would convict him of that on the evidence so far revealed by the State of New Jersey."

The fact police found $14,590 of the $50,000 Lindbergh ransom money in Hauptmann's home and garage in the Bronx, New York city, was regarded as highly incriminating by the authorities.

Hauptmann's explanation was that this money was left in his safekeeping by a former friend, Isidor Fisch, now dead. Fisch went to Germany in December, 1933, and died in Leipsic of tuberculosis last March. Hauptmann claims Fisch left two suitcases and a shoe box with him when he left New York for abroad.

The authorities scoff at this "Fisch story." They characterized it as very fishy.

Tomorrow: Mr. Kilgallen will discuss Hauptmann's alibi as to his whereabouts at the time the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped.

Defense Awaits New Note Probe

By Associated Press

Flemington, N. J., Dec. 12—The defense hoped today for a state investigation of its claim that the second Lindbergh ransom note was written not by Bruno Richard Hauptmann, but by a New Jersey carpenter of known criminal connections.

Edward J. Reilly, chief defense counsel, flung a verbal bombshell into the state's legal camp yesterday by announcing that at least one of the notes received by Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh after the kidnap-slaying of the flier's son was written by a member of a gang.

Attorney-General David T. Wilentz, chief of the state staff which intends to show that Hauptmann not only kidnaped the child but wrote the notes, was non-committal.

"Jafsie" Heads for Miami on "Probe"

By Associated Press

Columbia, S. C., Dec. 11—Dr. John F. ("Jafsie") Condon of New York city, who served as an intermediary in the Lindbergh kidnaping case, passed through Columbia tonight on his way to Miami, Fla., he said, to conduct "a personal investigation" into angles of the case.

Dr. Condon declined to discuss details of the kidnaping case, asserting he would "tell everything I know in open court" when called to testify at the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, charged with the Lindbergh baby's death.

HUNGRY, COLD FAMILY WAITS BASKET HELP

It is one flight up—in a tenement underneath the elevated trestle in Charlestown.

You stumble up over dark and garbage littered steps, feeling for the turns with a cautious foot. There is the smell of boiling clothes and cooking odors as you enter the tenement.

The family is about to dine—9 of them, with the invalid and widowed mother serving their dinner. And they dine on a slice of bread and bologna, and wash it down with black coffee.

It is all the food they have. This coffee has been made over a fire made of wood and coal picked up in the streets by the children who have shoes.

NO SHOES, NO COATS

Four of the children—girls, haven't any shoes. They don't go to school, not only because they haven't footwear, but they have no coats, either. They will go to school when they receive shoes and coats—that day seemed far off, until the Christmas Basket Editor arrived.

He found the children huddled near the stove, their small hands red from the cold. The girls were wearing summer dresses—no underwear or stockings.

Yes, they are on the welfare. But that isn't enough. They don't pay any bills for electricity or gas. They haven't any electricity or gas to pay for. They use an oil lamp. And this they only use about two hours each evening until they can get into their two beds.

The girls all sleep in one bed. It is warmer that way. Especially when you have no blankets or coats to throw over your cold body.

The mother told the Christmas Basket Editor that she must go to a hospital for a serious operation. But she is postponing this appointment until after Christmas, so that she can be with her family.

She then led the Editor and a photographer into an adjoining room. The floor was covered with a sheet of ice. There had been a leak in the water pipe the night before, and the floor had been covered with water before the arrival of a plumber. The water immediately froze.

TOUGHEST CASE

After leaving some money and a promise to return with help, the Christmas Basket editor and the photographer descended the stairs to the street. The photographer turned and looked back at the house and said in a low voice:

"That is the toughest case I have seen in 30 years of taking pictures."

He was wrong. This isn't the "toughest" case. There are thousands of them. The appeals continue to arrive with every mail delivery. A mighty task awaits the Christmas Basket editor of the Boston Evening American. And he cannot do it without YOUR help. It is up to YOU to do your bit. It is needed now more than ever before.

Send your donations to the American Christmas Basket editor, at 294 Devonshire street. If you are in the shopping district come into the office personally, or drop it in the mail.

Today among the contributions received was one from the Ideal Club of the West End. The secretary, Mario E. Spagnolo sent $5.

Still another generous donation was brought in by Louis A. Gosselin, quartermaster of the Suffolk County Council, Veterans of Foreign Wars. This check signed by the Commander, James A. Reilly, was for $15.

MIDNIGHT FETE TO AID FUND

East side, west side, all around the town, everybody everywhere is contributing their help and services to boost the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund.

The newest batter to step up to the plate, and we think it will be a home run hit, is Manager Max Michaels of Minsky's Park Theater. The entire theater has been set aside for a special midnight show Friday night, December 21, proceeds of which are to be given to the basket fund.

Bands from the leading night clubs, entire floor shows, vaudeville acts, have consented to aid. All these will appear in addition to the regular Minsky Burlesque Show.

A special Christmas children's party is also planned at the Park for Saturday afternon, December 22 after the regular performance. The cast from chorus to principals will play host to the needy children, fitting them with shoes. Santa Claus also is scheduled to appear.

They're Depending on You

Two little girls, in a Charlestown family of 12, had no hope of a real Christmas dinner until the Boston Evening American Basket Fund came to their aid. They are shown "hugging" the kitchen stove in their three-room flat. Their mother, soon to go to a hospital for a serious operation, is postponing action, to be with her family over Christmas. This and many other needy cases depend upon your help to the fund—Goodfellows.

Toy or Food Will Admit You to Basket Fund Show

Wouldn't you like to gladden the heart of some poor kiddie on Christmas Day? Of course you would. Well, then, here is your chance without pinching your pocketbook or upsetting the weekly budget.

Perhaps you have some discarded toy, which meant so much to junior last Christmas; or a doll that sister no longer cares for. Maybe you can conveniently spare that extra jar of jam, or can very well do with one can less of tomato soup.

If so, then bring any one of these articles to the special Toy and Food performance to be given Saturday morning at Loew's State Theater in aid of the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund. It will admit you. No money will be accepted. All you need is a toy or canned food.

The program will be made up of Laurel & Hardy and Our Gang comedies, cartoons, Mickey Mouse, novelties, traveltalks, news, song festival with Arthur Martel at the organ, and as the outstanding highlight Mary V. Corbett will stage her miniature revue of clever kiddies.

MORE APPEALS FOR HUNGRY CHILDREN

Still the appeals pour in. Here are more cases deserving the help of Goodfellows through the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund. Won't YOU see that some of these pathetic requests are answered with a real Christmas dinner?

CASE 39

I am a young mother who expects her sixth baby in February and I am writing to plead for a basket for Christmas. My children are all looking forward to Christmas and I am heart-broken as I do not know which way to turn. I get welfare and after I pay my rent and electric, I only have so little left.

My children, God only knows how destitute they are. Sometimes I look them over and often wonder is life worth the living. One day is like another. I have been to the hospital and they tell me I need milk and tomatoes in my system for the new baby but God help this one and my others as we have no milk for anyone of us. I have not one thing in clothes or blankets for the new baby. I am about crazy.

I am trying to write this with a broken pen and some blueing. Please do not forget us. Come and investigate anytime. I have been in bed a week with bronchitis. Six months ago I had pneumonia. It is so cold here. We have no coal. Please help me for I am desperate.

This mother lives in Roxbury. Anyone who wishes to help her may do so by calling the Christmas Basket Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for case No. 39.

CASE 40

I am writing to ask you that my children, ranging from five to 15 will not be forgotten this Christmas, as my husband has not been working for four years, only ERA work at $12 a week. After we pay rent, light, fuel, and my husband's carfare and lunch money out of that we are lucky to have a loaf of bare bread, and let me tell you there are plenty of times we do not have even that.

Both my son and myself are under the doctor's care and we have to miss a month at a time for our treatments on account of no carfares. Most of the time we have to walk to the City Hospital.

When I look at my children, cold and half-starved, there are times when I feel like throwing up the sponge altogether. If my husband didn't have to take carfare it would mean just a few more loaves of bread for us. Tomorrow he will have to walk to work on a project away out in the Chestnut Hill Playgrounds with nothing more than a slice of bare bread and a cup of black coffee. As for milk, it is over a year since there was a bottle of milk in our house. If it had not been for the church giving me an order slip for one dollar, I wouldn't even have had a slice of bread to give my children on Thanksgiving. The day before we had a nickel loaf of bread to divide amongst the whole family. We need a Christmas basket.

This mother lives in Charlestown. Anyone who wishes to help her may do so by calling the Christmas Basket Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for case No. 40.

CASE 41

My husband is out of work five years and I'm mother of five children and it's kind of hard to support a family of seven. I'm under the doctor's care for two months for a sickness which I had 18 years. So I cant' afford a Christmas basket for my poor little ones, if you can provide clothing for my children I'll be very glad to have them as my boy 15 years old wears his father's shoes and when he gets home from school he gives them back to him so my husband can get some air outdoors. He needs coat, shoes and pants.

I have five children, Joseph 15, Florence 14, Anna age 11, Bobby age 8, Rosie age 6. Anything will do for them to keep them warm when they go to school.

Please don't forget me this Christmas. Please don't forget them at this time of need. We are depending on you.

This mother lives in the North End. Anyone wishing to help her may do so by calling the Christmas Basket Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for case No. 41.

Just as in the case of the Mayfair party last Sunday night, which was a huge success, proceeds of the Brown Derby show will go to the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund to supply Christmas dinners to the less fortunate.

Stage, radio, screen and cabaret stars will be in the Brown Derby show, including Harry Einstein the "Nick Parkyakakas" of the air; Ranny Weeks and his RKO Gang of Keith stars; the floor shows of the Mayfair and the Cascades Roof, and entertainers of the theater currently playing in Boston.

Fake Doctor Gets 60 Days in Jail

Harry J. Simpson, 50, of Myrtle street, Beacon Hill, was sentenced to 60 days in the house of correction in East Cambridge district court when he pleaded guilty of posing as a physician, and passing worthless checks.

During the trial, it developed that the one known instance when he used his identity as a doctor to write a prescription, for an asthma sufferer, he had advocated a proper remedy.

In 1784 there was no dependable Federal currency, and Boston transacted its business with a great variety of gold and silver coin of foreign countries. One of the purposes for which this bank was founded in that year was to provide a safe place to keep money. The Directors voted that all money received should be counted and deposited in iron chests at the end of each day's business, and the keys turned over to the president for the night.

One hundred and fifty years ago, clerks perched high before slant-top desks scratched with quill pens on great ledgers a record of each day's transactions at the bank. Today, over 90% of all banking transactions are based on credit and recorded by electrically operated bookkeeping machines, with no currency changing hands. In this bank as many as 400,000 checks have been handled in a single day.

This bank has kept abreast of the needs of its customers ever since the Revolutionary War. Its facilities can be of distinct use to you today.

CRIME CONFERENCE MILD AS MILK

OPENING SESSION LIKE FIRST NIGHT AT OPERA

By WINIFRED BLACK

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service)

Washington, Dec. 12—Mild as milk—gentle as the cooing of a dovecote—this was the atmosphere in which the crime clinic started.

The opening session looked like a first night at a favorite opera—not too serious an opera mind you.

Something like Carmen or La Boheme—there was a glisten of soft silk and a gleam of white shirt fronts that made the affair rather festive to begin with.

No one, to look at the assemblage, would dream that a great nation was beginning a desperate fight in a civil war with criminals on one side and honest, decent folks on the other.

GLASSES GLITTER

The pale glitter of multitudinous pairs of spectacles here and there in the crowded audience told the on-looking world that the professors were there in battle scientific array.

The social workers were also among those present.

They looked at each other with bright smiles of intelligent understanding whenever some speaker said something about the psycology of crime or called a bad boy socially deficient and declared benignly that he was subject to "conduct disorders."

Attorney-General Cummings made a pleasant and reasonable speech in which he said that the Department of Justice could do this job of dealing with criminals and do it well if the people of the United States really want it done.

PALE RADIANCE

When the platform was suddenly illuminated by the pale radiance of President Roosevelt's handsome face the band did not have to play "See, the Conquering Hero Comes" to get the audience to its rather festively attired feet.

Before the first bar of that inspiring anthem began the crowd rose as one man.

The President's speech was well delivered, but somehow it seemed as if he had not found time to become especially interested in crime and criminology.

His vital and magnetic personality dominated the assemblage like a lighted fire on a cold hearth—but there was no special appeal in what he really said.

Procedures were really a little dull—there's no denying it, they really were.

FLESH AND BLOOD

J. Edgar Hoover made a good practical straight from the shoulder talk. He spoke of the federal men who had been murdered by the gangsters as if they were real men of flesh and blood and not just automata set up to be shot by a far away and invisible government.

Mr. Hoover wants some provision made for the wives and families of the men who died at the hands of the gangsters and he would like to see public opinion make heroes of these men and not of the cruel cowards who shoot them down.

Mr. Hoover is not in favor of easy parole—he seems to be of the opinion that the life of one decent citizen is worth a good deal more than a few years of a convicted felon's existence.

Hoover is a vigorous young man who looks as if he would like a good fight himself and he is said to be the greatest fingerprint expert in the world.

Judge Charles Hoffman of Cincinnati intoned a fine far away eulogy on the modern attempt to psychologize crime.

Judge Hoffman's voice was low and sweet, like that of a character in a rather well known song, but those of us who strained an attentive ear gathered that the judge was much more interested in the cause of crime than in any determined attempt to control it.

Some ignorant and injudicious person sitting within range of my hearing whispered something about a good, smart nightstick in the hands of a good active policeman as a possible method of control of the juvenile gangster.

Or, perhaps, murmured the same outrageous being, if father would take the matter of the boy's "unsocial conduct" in hand when the cop on the block reported the boy's determination to steal every apple and every banana off the corner fruit stand—perhaps there would be not so much need of psychopathic insight in the problem of the boy.

HINTS AT STORIES

Mr. John J. Bennett, Jr., attorney general of New York state, generalized rather well about commercial racketeering. He hinted that he had some wonderful stories, authentic ones, too, about commercial racketeers and their victims—I think we all wished he would have told us some of these stories and let us indulge our human desire to be either shocked or grieved or astonished—just a little bit.

Dr. Sheldon Glueck of Harvard University was rather simple and straightforward—for a professor. He used words that the average man in the street could understand every once in a while.

Gordon Dean, special attorney of the United States Department of Justice, made some good practical suggestions as to state compacts which would keep criminals from making a joke of crime by running from one state to another like a boy playing hopskotch on a broad and well marked sidewalk.

There was some little discussion but nothing particularly stirring came from them.

TEN GALLON HATS

As we left the comfortable and rather ornamental hall where the meeting was held we passed two United States marshals from the Southwest.

We knew they were from the Southwest because they wore 10 gallon hats and had other marks of distinction very easy to read.

"Buddy," said the black haired sheriff to the blondish sheriff. "I certainly wish these gentlemen—" an to near the way he pronounced gent el l-me n n was worth a whole course in Owen Wister.

"I wish that these gentlemen," said he, "would stop chasing rainbows and get out and tell us how they're going to help us chase crooks."

"Sure," said the blond sheriff—"sure."

And he searched the landscape for some small target—found it in a bit of fast melting snow, reached it with the accuracy of long practice and repeated in his musical drawl, "Sure do."

GET THEIR MAN

But what can these unlettered citizens of the far and unfettered West know of psychology and psychiatry, either criminal or otherwise?

All they want to do is to get their man and see that their man gets justice.

I do hope that before the conference is over they will feel that they have not journeyed to the effete East entirely in vain.

I hear that the newspapers are in for a trouncing.

That's nice—the overworked reporters will be roused from their slumber and allowed to get a story that might possibly be interesting reading. And that, said the duchess, might possibly make a few of us sit up quite straight and listen quite hard.

GOLD WARNING BY MUSSOLINI

By Associated Press

Milan, Italy, Dec. 12—Italy's lira is on the gold standard to stay and persons who pass rumors to the contrary will be punished severely, Premier Mussolini's newspaper, Popolo D'Italia, assured the nation today.

A rumored further six per cent cut in government salaries, it said, is untrue because "at the present time costs of living are going up."

A rumored tax on coupons for consolidated bonds and other emissions is "grotesque, because the bond conversion last February brought a 30 per cent reduction in the income of bondholders."

The lira is on the gold standard and will remain so, said Il Duce's organ. "The drastic measure taken at the last council of ministers is more eloquent than any discord could be on governmental policy"—this was a measure making the government overseer and controller of every cent of Italian money invested abroad.

BABY ILLNESS LAID TO CELL

Mayor Richard M. Russell announced today that he had requested John J. Terry, superintendent of public buildings, to explain to him a group of alleged facts brought to the mayor's attention.

The mayor stated that he had been informed that last Monday, Emily Carlos, 33, of Elm street, Cambridge had been arrested and brought to police headquarters with her four weeks old baby girl, Lilian.

The mother and child were then placde in a cell in the woman's block at headquarters and kept there from 11 a. m. Monday until 9 a. m. Tuesday, it is alleged.

When they were taken to East Cambridge district court, Tuesday morning, the baby was found to be suffering from bronchitis and was immediately taken to the Cambridge City Hospital.

National Crime Institute to Combat Rackets Looms

By International News Service

Washington, Dec. 12—Greater authority to the Federal Government in the drive against crime loomed today as the result of the national crime conference in session here.

Under the direction of the Department of Justice, a national institute of criminology appeared to be in the making as the delegates continued their efforts to decide on a constructive program to combat crime. Racketeering and crime cost 13 billions of dollars in this country annually.

The conference was told of the need for more effective co-ordination of the activities of police and prosecuting officers of the various states. While George Z. Medalie, former U. S. district attorney in New York, pointed to the system of county government as inefficient in law enforcement, Gilbert Bettman of Cincinnati urged the retention of this form of local government.

Medalie recommended a central investigative organization for all the states, and to be as effective as the Department of Justice.

"The detective bureau of the average large city, except for a few mechanical devices at police headquarters, is little different today from what it was 20 years ago," said Medalie. "No matter how honest and energetic, its work is limited to the crude, hard, old-fashioned police routine. A central organization as effective as our national Department of Justice, in both its investigating and prosecuting aspects, must be developed."

Ferdinand Pecora, a member of the Federal Securities & Exchange Commission, and former counsel for the Senate banking committee, urged the elimination of the laws giving the defendant the privilege to decline to testify in a criminal case, and the requirement of a unanimous verdict of a jury. In criminal cases he favors a vote of 10 jurors to convict instead of all 12.

Resolutions commending the Department of Justice for its anti-crime campaign and requests that the conference go on record as favoring a study of juvenile delinquency have been made from the floor.

Speakers for today include J. Weston Allen, Boston.

National Crime Bureau Asked by Murphy

Washington, Dec. 12—Proposals calling for creation of a national crime prevention bureau and for establishment of an agency to co-operate with agencies of publicity in behalf of law enforcement officials were presented to the national crime conference today by United States Marshal John J. Murphy of Massachusetts.

Murphy listed poverty, idleness and disease as the foremost causes of crime, with lack of proper home life and religious training as contributing factors.

BRITON TO HEAD SAAR PATROL

By International News Service

Geneva, Dec. 11—The League of Nations Council today named Colonel Geoffrey Knox of Britain, chairman of its Saar commission, to be commander-in-chief of an international army of 3500 men that four powers will send to the Saar to maintain order during the plebiscite on January 13.

The international force, composed of 1500 British, 1500 Italian, 250 Dutch and 250 Swedish soldiers, will be installed in the Saar territory by December 22 and will remain until shortly after the plebiscite, at which Saarlanders will decide whether to return to Germany, become part of France, or remain under league mandate. Reunion with Germany is the generally expected result.

WIVES, BABIES ARE VICTIMS OF GAMBLING

The American working-man, his wife—and in some cases, his children—are depriving themselves of nearly $800,000,000 a year by risking their pocket money on the "Policy" or "Numbers" racket, Sweepstakes, Speculative Stocks, Bagatelle, Horse Racing, Poker, Bridge, Slot Machines and other petty gambling rackets.

The petty gambling racketeers, stepping from bootlegging to other profitable sources of illicit revenue, are mulcting the people in games of chance in which the odds are from 100 to 1 to a million to 1 against the player.

By LOU WEDEMAR

(Copyright, 1934, Universal Service)

New York, Dec. 12—The U. S. postal authorities, in their new drive against foreign sweepstakes gambling, have closed American mails to 534 agents of the Irish Hospital sweep, the Canadian and Calcutta sweeps, and other big sweeps based on horse races.

But have they killed the sale of tickets—at $2.50 a throw? They have not—tickets are being smuggled into the United States daily.

Irish hospital sweepstakes tickets are selling in the United States at the rate of $100,000 a week—illegally. The money goes to Ireland and only a small percentage sees America again. And thousands of the tickets sold here are fakes, printed and "watermarked" by the petty gyp racketeers. Rare is the workingman with a little loose cash who won't buy a ticket—rarer is the winner!

"Policy" racketeers accept bets as small as five cents—in some localities, from children, as small as a penny.

"Policy," in which the odds are 1000 to 1 or more against the player, is perhaps the meanest and yet most flourishing of the present-day American gambles. It costs New York clerks, laborers, waiters and housewives $500,000 a week, $100,000 a week in Boston, and others throughout the United States, $900,000 a week more—$78,000,000 a year for the nation.

The slot-machine racket, which cost 35 lives in New York in the last decade, has been wiped out in this city. But over the rest of the country it reigns supreme, taking $500,000 to $1,000,000 a week in nickels, dimes and quarters—with the odds in most cases incalculably against the player, for most machines are so fixed that the Jackpot—which pays $5 for a 5-cent bet—cannot be won. Tests have shown 10-1 to 50-to-1 odds against the player.

(Tomorrow—Reports from various cities on gambling conditions).

House Deadlock Broken by Fire

By Associated Press

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 12—The fire which destroyed the Hotel Kerns, taking, among others, the lives of two Republican and one Democratic representatives, who would have been members of the Legislature taking office in January, broke a 50-50 deadlock in the House and gave Democrats a probable slender majority of 49 to 48.

Special elections to fill the vacancies cannot be held until after the House is organized.

The re-elected Republican representatives who died were Donald W. Sias, Midland, and John Goodwine, Marlette. The re-elected Democrat who perished was Representative Charles D. Parker, Otisville.

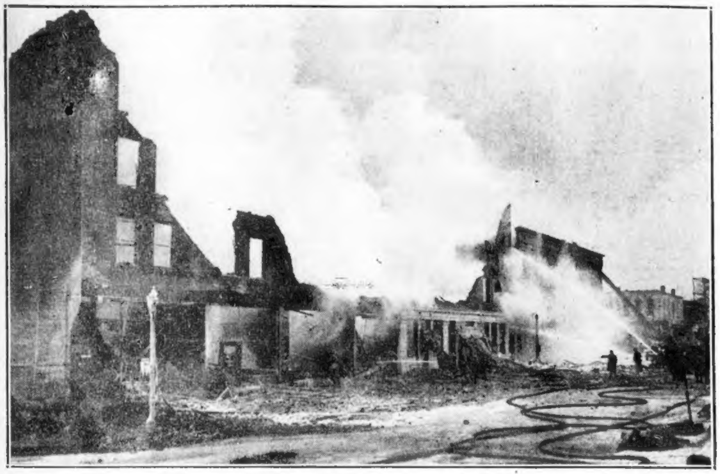
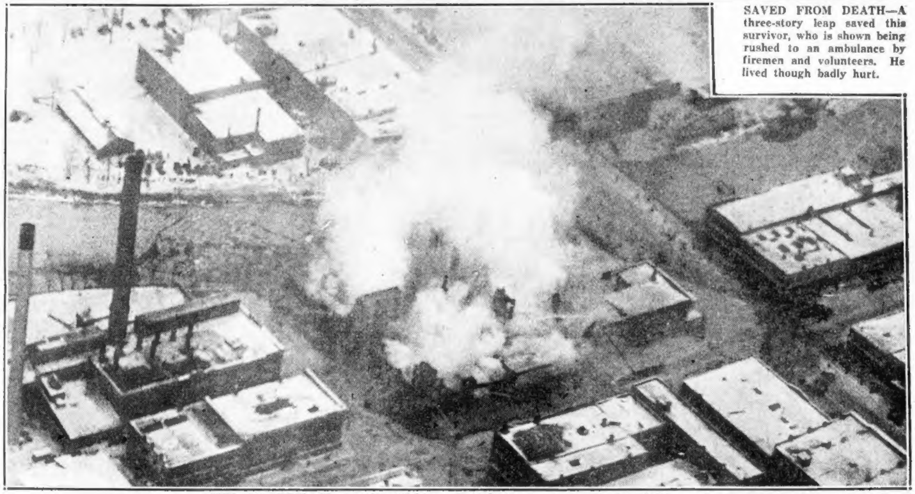
RUINS STILL BLAZE AS SEARCH GOES ON FOR HOTEL DEAD



STARK RUINS—Still smouldering embers were all that remained today of the Lansing hotel where death rode the flames. In foreground is river where victims drowned.

SAVED FROM DEATH—A three-story leap saved this survivor, who is shown being rushed to an ambulance by firemen and volunteers. He lived though badly hurt.

HELP CAME TOO LATE—This man, trapped in the Kerns Hotel, Lansing, Michigan, perished when fire broke out at 5:30 a. m. Firemen are pictured carrying out his body. Many of the dead drowned when they plunged into the icy Grand river in the rear of the building.



AIRPLANE VIEW—The Lansing, Michigan, hotel death trap. In less than 20 minutes after the alarm was first sounded the walls collapsed, carrying helpless, screaming guests down into the inferno. Women, their hair ablaze, ran screaming up and down the halls, vainly seeking exit, survivors said. Few had time to don clothing and scores of the 190 guests suffered frozen feet. More than 30 were in hospitals today, their condition reported to be serious. Six of the dead were Michigan legislators, who were on hand for a special session of the legislature that was to have opened yesterday.

"STOUT FELLA, DAD"—Here is Miss Betty Van Dyne at Lansing, Mich., visiting the hospital bedside of her father, F. E. Van Dyne, who saved his life in the Kern Hotel fire by jumping from a third story window.

CRIES DIED AWAY—The front wall of the doomed Kerns Hotel toppled into the incandescent mass of flame, carrying hapless guests to an awful death. The building burned to a shell before firemen brought the flames under control. Today police searched the red hot ruins for bodies of those still missing, though identification of the 20 believed buried in the ashes was feared to be impossible. THEATERS IN BOSTON, LYNN AND PAWTUCKET BLOWN UP six-inch length of wick, partially charred, the other end damp with what may be nitroglycerine. They also found metal bits which appeared to be part of a pipe. Metal was also found in the wreckage in the Capitol in Lynn.

MAJESTIC AND TREMONT ARE BOMBED HERE

Time bombs, infernal machines constructed to explode by clock arrangement at a certain hour, are believed to have been used in each instance.

Officials Move to Prevent More Blasts

The state department of public safety, the state fire marshal's office and Boston police at once began a search for the bombers and took steps to prevent further terrorism of this nature which has been experienced in other sections of the country but never before here.

The explosions occurred within a period of one hour and 10 minutes, indicating existence of a definite widespread plot.

At exactly 4 o'clock the first bomb exploded in the lobby of the Tremont Theater at 176 Tremont street, blowing the ticket booth to splinters, wrecking the lobby walls and doors, raising the outside sidewalk several inches and smashing nearby windows, including those in Child's restaurant, where there were a score of diners.

Guests in the nearby Touraine and Bradford Hotels were aroused. Across the Common in the State House the blast was so loud that guards began a search of the building there.

Second Blast Comes In Few Minutes

The second warning of a general terrorist plot came a few minutes later when a bomb exploded in the balcony of the Capitol Theater, Main street, Pawtucket, wrecking a concrete projection booth, a large section of seats and tearing great chunks from the walls and ceiling of the auditorium.

At 4:30 came the third explosion, in the Capitol Theater in Union street, Lynn. The bomb apparently had been left there in the men's smoking room under the orchestra floor. It ripped out walls and furnishings. The detonation was heard for a radius of several miles.

At 5:10 came the fourth and final blast in the men's smoking room of the Majestic Theater, 219 Tremont street. This blew out one entire wall and reduced the room to wreckage.

Alice Gallagher

Annie Astot

Owners of the four theaters bombed have had difficulties with labor, in the Boston theaters very recently.

The Majestic and the Tremont, recently acquired by the Fred E. Lieberman interests are said to have clashed with one union organization at an NRA code hearing after employing members of another union.

Non-Union Labor Employed, Report

The two Capitol theaters are the property of E. M. Loew of Boston, employing a majority of nonunion labor. Loew and Lieberman have no business connection, they said. Loew has many theaters throughout New England, and police placed them all under guard.

These included two houses at Portland, Me.

The tip resulting in the South End raid came from a Boston Elevated motorman who reported to police that at 5:30 at Boylston street a young man boarded his car and was heard to say:

"They bombed the Tremont. Some of those —— theaters should be closed."

This man left the car at B street, South Boston.

A dozen police participated in the raid. The cartridges seized had not been exploded. Further search was made for shells from which the power might have been taken. The motorman went to headquarters to attempt to identify the son arrested as the man who rode in his car.

Another important tip came to police from Jerome Jerome of the interests controling the Majestic, Tremont and Columbia. He said that at 11 o'clock last night he visited the Columbia just before it closed and his suspicion was aroused by a man who remained behind the departing crowd.

He went to him and asked him if he could assist him out. The man aswered:

"You —— ——, you'll find a way out yourself before morning.'

The information caused a thorough search at the Columbia.

One angle of the investigation was the reported failure of the Boston police bureau of operations to broadcast a radio message regarding the first bombing. Such a message would at least have placed police in cruising cars on the alert and might have led to discouvery of the second bomb in time to avert an explosion.

Both Boston explosions were felt by early morning workers in the Boylston street subway station and the Boston Elevated began an immediate inspection to determine whether any serious damage resulted to the subway. None was immediately found.

The Tremont is located opposite the entrance to the station. When the Tremont bomb exploded, many in the tunnel feared the walls were collapsing.

Two Women Hurt In Majestic Blast

Two scrubwomen were at work in the Majestic when the bomb went off. They were thrown to the floor, cut and bruised. They were Mrs. Annie Ascot of Common street and Mrs. Alice Gallagher of Emerald street.

Injured slightly by the Tremont blast were William Williamson, 24, of Virginia street, Somerville, and Harry Mendlov, 27, Gaston street, Roxbury. They were thrown from stepladders on which they were at work fixing strips of felt along the tops of the doors. Williamson is a carpenter and Mendlov an engineer employed at the Tremont.

The threat to blast the Bradford Hotel in Tremont street with all of its occupants came to Lieutenant Edward Mitton of Division 4 of the Boston police.

A strange voice on the telephone which could not be traced, told the lieutenant that the hotel was next in the dynamiting.

He immediately rushed a special detail to the hotel and had inspectors search the building from top to bottom.

Lieutenant Edward Seiboldt, ballistics expert of the Boston police department, was summoned to the scenes of the Boston explosions with other explosive experts of the department.

Three deputy state fire marshals arrived early on the scene to check damage done to the theaters. Meyer Waterhouse, chemist of the Boston fire department, also was present, soon after the bombing, and began a search for fragments of the bombs.

Building Commissioner Edward Roemer checked up on the damage but declined to make any statement.

At station 4, Warren avenue, Inspector John F. McCarthy, of the homicide division at headquarters, with William J. Shanahan, police stenographer and James R. Claflin, newly appointed deputy superintendent of police.

The Majestic scrubwomen told police that they had not seen anyone in the building after they arrived shortly after the last show let out at 11:30 o'clock.

Windows in the building housing the Tremont Theater were blown out as high up as the fourth floor.

The entire front of the structure was destroyed, with pieces of the wreckage flying across the street to the common.

Two taxi drivers were parked directly across the street from the Tremont when the bomb went off.

They gave their names as Edward Latterner, 26 of 25 Canton street South End, and Lester Rimmer, 25 of 30 Franklin street, Everett.

Latterner said he was looking directely at the front entrance of the theater. A red flare, followed immediately by a loud "Boom!" brought a crowd of nearly 50 people rushing to the scene, he said, in spite of the early hour.

Front Doors, Signs Blown to Pieces

The front doors were blown to pieces, and the heavy sign over the entrance, with lettering announcing the picture showing, was knocked loose.

Latterner said he turned in a fire alarm at once.

A police cruising car was parked less than two blocks away, he said. It headed for the scene.

An inspection of the interior of the Tremont showed a clutter of debris, bits from the first floor ceiling, the interior decorations and fragments from the stairs, heaped together in a chaotic pile.

A fire broke out in the basement, but was put under control by firemen, who answered Latterner's alarm.

Charles Gueitt, 49, of 137 Peatmore street, Somerville, the night watchman, and Eddie Martin of 176 Tremont street were not working at the time. Martin was asleep, he said, and was buried to the floor from his couch where he had been sleeping.

Several night workers from all-night restaurants in the vicinity were leaving for their homes just a few minutes before the blast occured, and narrowly missed being showered with falling mortar and glass as they hurried by.

Passengers in a passing west bound subway train reported that they distinctly felt the tremble of the ground.

Residents as far apart as Beacon Hill and Back Bay said they heard the noise and felt the temblors that followed the explosion.

Edward Latterner

Lester Rimmer

The distinctive odor of explosives was smelled by several passersby, and individuals in the crowd which promptly assembled.

District Fire Chief Dennis Coughlin, said that the wreck was caused by a bomb.

Taxi Driver Sees Door Blown Out

E. C. Daffin, who was walking on the other side of Tremont street, said that he saw a "red flare, and heard a rumbling blast."

Immediately afterward, he said, he was showered by flying glass, and the whole front of the building seemed to have been caving in.

In Lynn the time bomb, placed in the men's room in the basement of the Capitol Theater on Union street, exploded with such force as to lift the floor above it four or five inches for an area of about 30 square feet, Lynn police said.

Lieberman was called to Boston from his Lowell home and questioned by Deputy Superintendent Claflin and other police officials at Station 4.

When police learned he also controlled the Columbia theater in Washington street, South End, a policeman was placed there.

Lieberman said:

"There are two unions. That's the story."

Ferd Lieberman

He said that when he took over the Majestic and Tremont they had been closed for several days. He reopened them as picture houses, employing members of the Knights of Labor, a union organization which he said was affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

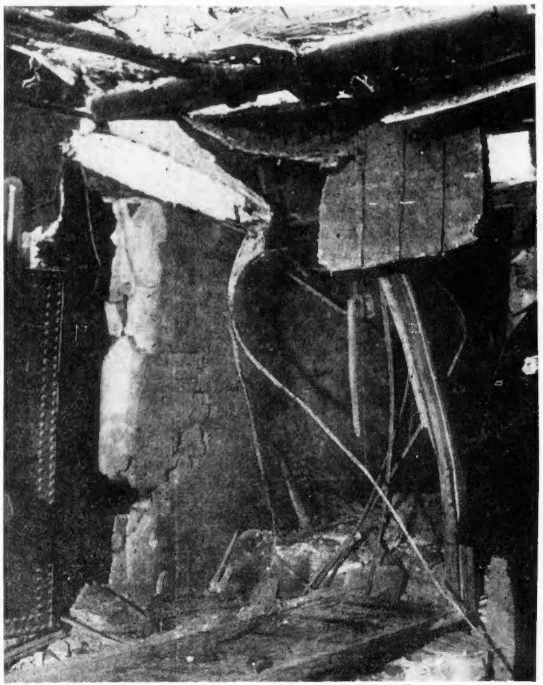
On December 4, he said, the Independent Alliance of Stage Hands forced an NRA theater code hearing in Boston, seeking to compel him to employ stage hand members of that organization at $60 and $65 a week.

Lieberman said he refused to do so and was upheld, as the only use he had for stage hands was to raise and lower fire curtains. Members of the "I. A." previously had been employed in these theaters, he said.

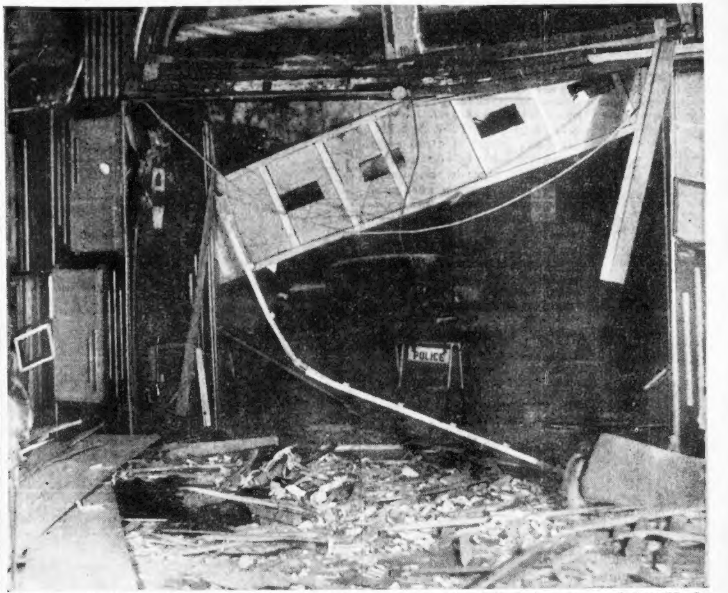
The controlling organization for his theaters is Greater Boston Theaters, Inc., of which Harry Richmond is head. Richmond attended the NRA hearing, he said. This organization took over the Tremont last August and the Majestic only last Friday.

At his Tremont street offices near the Tremont theater, E. M. Lowe said from what he had learned he was inclined to believe the explosion in his Lynn theater was caused by sewer gas. He said he did not know what caused the Pawtucket blast.

Bombers Leave Grim Trail of Destruction, Near Death, in Wrecked Boston Theaters



Here, in the confined quarters of the men's washroom of the Majestic Theater, the mysterious blast, believed a time bomb, had full chance to exert its terrific power. Note the extent to which floor, walls and ceilings alike are shattered.



This view of the Tremont Theater lobby, looking outward toward the street, shows from another angle the extent of the damage done by the explosion of what is thought to have been a nitroglycerin or dynamite time bomb. Only the height and open construction of the theater entrance made it possible for the blast to wreak its force without bringing all the front of the building down in ruins.

Women in Theater Tell of Blast in Majestic

Mrs. Alice Gallagher, 26 Emerald street, South End, Majestic Theater employe, said:

"It was shortly after 4 o'clock. Mrs. Asdot (Mrs. Annie Asdot, 45 Concord street, South End, also employed at the Majestic) and I had just finished our lunch and were having our tea. We then went to the smoking room to get a carpet sweeper we had left there when there was a terrible noise like a cannon.

"A sharp odor almost overcame us, and we ran out, starting for the Tremont Theater, where we knew some of the men would be, unaware that it had been bombed."

Edward Shanley, 28 Albemarle street, Arlington Heights, who was polishing windows of a resturant directly across the street from the Majestic Theater, said:

"I heard the explosion and saw women run out of the theater, but I saw no flame, so I continued my work until some policemen arrived on the scene. I fixed the time of the explosion at 4 o'clock in response to their questions."

William Williamson, 14 Virginia street, Somerville, who was repairing a door in the orchestra pit of the Tremont Theater at the time of the bombing, stated:

"I was standing on a stepladder placing a piece of felt on the top of the door when I heard the sharp, sudden explosion and felt the concussion. I was knocked from the ladder and fell to the floor, but was not hurt.

"A cloud of smoke and dust immediately settled over the entire orchestra pit. I ran to the front of the theater and saw the whole place a mass of wreckage. I did not know what to do. I ran to a side entrance. Just then the police came in and I saw there was no danger, so I offered them my help."

suddenly walked across the street toward me, but when I raced my motor, as though ready to pick him up, he waved his hand in a sign that he didn't want a cab.

"He strolled, without haste, into the entrance of the subway and disappeared.

"Just then a fellow cabby, Lester Rimmer, 25, of 30 Franklin street, Everett, came up and asked for a 'push.'

"As he did so, for some reason, I turned and looked at the theater. At that instant it seemed to disappear in a red flare, followed by a loud BOOM.

SHOWER OF GLASS

"The ticket booth, flush with the inside of the sidewalk, burst to bits, and a shower of glass from the marquee overhead, and from windows on the upper floors of the building cascaded to the sidewalk.

"I thought at once of the man who had been standing there but a moment before. I realized that I should have to describe him, and thought over what he looked like.

"He was tall, seemingly about six feet, and was dressed neatly in a dark blue overcoat, with a soft gray hat. He seemed to be in the early thirties."

Tremont Watchman Misses Death by 5 Minutes

Charles Veditl, 137 Piedmont street, Somerville, Tremont Theater watchman, told the following story of the blast:

"I saved my life by five minutes. If I had been five minutes late in pulling that box (his watchman's signal) out in the foyer, I would have been blown to pieces. It seemed that I had no sooner laid down my watchman's box than I heard a terrific explosion, turned around and saw the spot where I had been standing a few minutes before in ruins.

"I became cold all over. I couldn't move for a few minutes. I dropped a broom that I was holding and didn't know which way to turn. After a while I saw there was nothing more going to happen and I approached the foyer. I looked up and saw the electric light bulbs in the three chandeliers had not been broken.

"At that time the firemen had broke in one of the doors and were filling the place. I put on the lights to show them the way around and then began answering their questions."

Edward Martin, porter, who lives in the theater, declared:

"My bed seemed to come up in the middle and push me out on the floor. I grabbed my trousers and, without putting on any shoes, I ran for the nearest exit. This was by the stairs leading to the street. The stairs were littered with wreckage and the front door had been blown off the hinges. Smoke filled the entire areaway.

"I thought a steam pipe had broken and I started back into the theater, but stopped because I was afraid of the felling timbers. I waited a few minutes, then went upstairs and dressed fully, and came down and helped the police."

'beacon hill'

By Betty Alden

WHEN THE FIRST STIRRING CHORDS of the wedding march pealed forth in historic King's Chapel this afternoon, a lovely society bride was breathlessly poised in the back of the church, clasping her father's arm, and waiting for the procession of her attendants to start down the aisle . . . Her long tulle veil was arranged over the satin train of her cream-colored gown and she carried a bouquet of calla lilies . . . A few steps ahead of her, the bridal attendants, gowned in garnet crepe gowns, with brown hats and carrying beaver muffs, began to move slowly past the rows of guests who had gathered for the wedding of Miss Katherine Bradlee Davis to James R. Hammond . . .

MRS. JAMES R. HAMMOND

The bride, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Lincoln Davis of Beacon street, was attended by her sister, Miss Emily Davis, Miss Ethel Hooper Grew and Louise Crowninshield, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Davis Crowninshield of Exeter street, as flower girl.

FRAGRANCE OF VIENNA PINE WOODS CAPTURED IN LOVELY NEW POMANDER

Given in Marriage

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge, safe in her father's arms and thankful for his timely intervention in her trying interview with Lee Chow, reviews the fatherless years of her childhood.

CHAPTER 215

AS I UTTERED my tremulous, thankful query to my father, after Lee Chow's exit from the room, he smiled down at me with infinite tenderness.

"I think sometimes I am psychic concerning any need of yours for me," he said. "Perhaps it is because for so many years I wandered, a pariah, seeking you, that you became the one obsessing thought of my life."

"I know, dearest and best of fathers," I mumured, and for several seconds we stood locked in that close embrace, while my memory gave me lightning-like glimpses of that time of which he was speaking.

DESERTED HIS MOTHER

I never had any childish memories of my father. When I was four years old, he had deserted my mother and me and gone away with my mother's best friend. I had been raised to implacable resentment against him, but my mother on her deathbed had charged me to love and forgive him, if he ever came into my life and needed me. Something in that solemn injunction had made me realize that my mother was remorsefully admitting to me—and to her own soul—that she had been partly at fault for the cataclysm which had destroyed her life.

That the other woman had been but an episode in my father's life, and that my mother had been for him the 'one woman," ever after denied him, I knew. He had asked for a reconciliation not long after his desertion of her, but had met with a stern denial, and an edict forbidding him ever to come near either her or me.

Then he had disappeared from our lives until after my marriage, when his long search for me—which had given him the sobriquet of "The Quester of Broad-Way"—had ended in his recognition of my likeness to my mother.

How vivid was the memory of the night when first I had seen him in a Broadway restaurant, and Dicky had told me that the striking looking man at a table near us was called "The Quester," because he always appeared to be watching for someone. Later he revealed himself as my father, after a misunderstanding on his account that almost precipitated Dicky and me into a marital tragedy.

PRECIOUS MEMORIES

Just as vivid, but more tender, were the other memories that came crowding upon me. Never, despite the long years which had separated me from him, had I experienced any difficulty in obeying my little mother's dying injunction to love him and to forgive him. And never, I believe, did any daughter receive more love and care than that been my portion from the moment he revealed himself to me.

I have been able to make his later years as happy as his remorseful memories of my mother will permit, and my children are completing the task of healing his sorrow.

I guessed that memories were swaying my father, too—memories that went back farther than mine. I knew it when he tightened his clasp of me, and said wistfully:

"Have I been a good father to you, my darling? Good knows I have meant to be, but a man cannot understand, sometimes—"

I took an arm from around his neck and laid my hand firmly across his lips.

"You always have had the most divine understanding," I whispered. "Please do not underrate yourself. I never, never can tell you what you have been to me."

"You do not need to tell me anything," he said. "You have shown your love for me every moment of our life together. You and your children have healed wounds that I did not think could be healed. And I want you always to remember that all my life is at your service.

"Now, let me answer the question you asked me just now. I knew you needed me, because I had been watching you, or rather watching Lee Chow, through that balcony window outside."

He pointed to an odd little window several feet from the ground, high up in the wall.

"Father!" I gasped. "How ever did you get up there?"

"I was an athlete, once, my dear," he said, "and I had a strong incentive for the climb. I knew that I must watch Lee Chow, and find out what he was trying to do."

I swayed against him at a sudden memory.

"His eyes!" I whispered fearfully, "Did you see his eyes?"

Foot Treatment

Question: What permanent cure, if any, do you know for corns? I have been regularly to a chiropodist for years, but corns always seem to come back in a few weeks. I am discouraged about the condition of my feet. ARLINE J.

Medford.

Answer: The only permanent cure for corns is achieved by wearing shoes that do not press or rub. A chiropodist can clear away corn ills, but they will certainly come back if the cause continues. Don't wear spiked heels during the daytime—try to wear sensible walking shoes. In the house wear sandals and light stockings. Give your feet an occasional vacation from the confinement of their houses.

Dusty Pastels, Dark-Accented, Glow Under Fur Coats

AS A HAPPY CHANGE from the richly dark or heavily metal encrusted frocks that have been a fairly steady diet since the opening of the cold season fashions, comes the dusty pastel frock of a heavy, somewhat mossy crepe. For all its delicate, flattering color, it is distinctly a mid-winter frock. And nothing emphasizes the glossy loveliness of a fur coat better than such a frock beneath it . . . the charteuse-turquoise of the one illustrated with brown furs, or a soft raspberry or honey-beige with black, for instance.

Shirtmaker lines have a line-up of pleating, even to edging the pockets. A grosgrain "Southern Gentleman" string tie knots under the chin. The color is frankly interesting—a softened and "blued" chartreuse becoming to every type. Which cannot be said of chartreuse, ordinarily. Note the return of the off-the-face hat, in bengaline with a rhinestone half-moon clip.

Miss Olivia Stone, Beacon street debutante, models. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Sidney Stone. She is a fancy skater of no mean accomplishments . . . tiny, with a flashing brunette beauty . . . and tints her nails mahogany red from moon to tip . . . likes brown and gold for winter daytime, but black or the deeper jewel tones for evening.

If you wish for details on the budget frock or hat shown, which is from a Boston shop, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty [illegible]000, or write her at the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

CHAPTER XXIII

"Lord, Helen, we've got everything to be happy about," Walter went on fervently. "And now my family has taken you into its heart. They're really the best girls in the world. They may have sharp tongues, but at heart they're true blue. Loyal as the sun! Why, the way they've stuck to me in building up this business is remarkable. The sacrifices they made! The unswerving loyalty! We must ask Irene and Dirk to dinner. She's been great."

"Yes, hasn't she? I'll ask them for Friday. Dirk has been so nice, too."

"Oh, he's the best in the world! I only wish, though, Irene was happier. She's at him all the time to go back to his old job. He's losing thirty-five thousand a year."

"But if he's happier . . ."

"I know, but Irene isn't. Well, maybe they'll work things out. Irene's bound to. She's deucedly clever."

"Yes, she is," Helen yawned. "I'm so tired."

He gathered her up in his arms. "Let me put you to bed as if you were my child. My baby. My dearest, dearest, dear . . ."

"My dearest, dearest, dear," she whispered in return.

By midwinter, she was at her wits' end. But even before Walter began to find these evenings irksome, Helen sensed he was not satisfied and she took heart. Perhaps he would find a way to stop this avalanche of friendliness and cordiality that was like a rope around her neck.

They were at Irene's on New Year's Eve for a formal dinner party.

Helen had stage fright no longer. She could even venture to talk when she was not in range of Irene's cool, critical eye. Helen's success with the Terhunes (she was there at least once a week and often she went down just to spend an afternoon with the old lady) was a surprise and a source of annoyance to Irene.

She knew—because Cecily told her—that Cecily and Helen had subscribed to a series of orchestral concerts on Tuesday afternoons. Irene found out too that Helen went to tea at the Terhunes' and even spent the night there once when it rained so hard that Mrs. Terhune wouldn't let them go home.

Tonight Helen wore a green velvet evening gown, very dark and simple. She wasnt' quite sure of the dress, but Marian had adored it. Walter, accustomed to the extreme fashions his sister affected, thought it was sweet, "nice and simple."

Irene spotted the dress the instant she saw Helen. She gasped a little at the snowy whiteness of Helen's back.

"That's a smart frock," Irene conceded. "How did you happen to choose it?"

Helen smiled. She missed the "quite" in Irene's approval. She knew now the dress was exceptional. "Marian and I saw it in Milgrim's yesterday. We both liked it at once."

"It's a little too sophisticated for your type but it is becoming. You mustn't ever, you know, get away from the kind of thing that is your type."

Helen saw Dirk alone for a second and she made her way to where he stood.

"Hello," he grinned, "you really look absolutely swell!"

"Now you listen to me, young woman. I've got a whole bagful of compliments for you. First, your skin is like the glow of flames on old ivory and, second—"

"Oh, please. I'd rather not hear any more." She laughed. "My vanity simply can't stand up under it."

He looked down at her steadily. She stood before him, her hands clasped simply. He said seriously in a lowre voice, "How is everything going?"

"Oh, so, so. Why?"

"I don't know, Nellie, you have a curiously harassed look in your eye. I just wondered. Doing much exploring these days?"

"I get so little time, Dirk. I don't even get time to read evenings as much as I used to when I worked at the Salon."

He looked at her steadily. "Walter still has that house in the country, hasn't he?"

"It would give you the time to yourself that you want.

"It would give you privacy. You'll find the country heavenly to explore. It's even more fascinating than the city." He spoke in a low voice.

Helen rushed on before they were interrupted.

"The house is empty, Dirk. It needs alteration and furnishing. Do you think I could . . ."

"Ces is a wiz at remodeling old places. See what she's done at New Canaan."

"Oh, your mother's place is lovely. I'm crazy about it."

"The furnishings seem so . . . so right."

"Most of the stuff can be picked up by careful shopping."

"But I've never bought a thing. I mean . . . like furniture. I wouldn't know how, Dick."

"Nonsense. Of course you would. You have good taste. You couldn't go wrong. Just you follow your instincts and not the fashion of the moment and you're bound to achieve a comfortable and charming home which is all that matters. I will help you. I know some of the shops that specialize in furniture for country homes. I have a raft of interior decoration magazines at mother's. I'll dig them out for you—when you're ready."

"That would be grand, Dirk."

"I think it's the only solution for you, Nellie. It will be a painless and effective method of breaking away. You want to live your own life."

"Oh, Dirk, I've been avoiding the true state of affairs even to myself. Oh, how well you know! Yes, I want to be alone with Walter. We have so little time together and we love each other so. We want to be alone!"

"I know just what you mean. This may be a way out for you. Call me up tomorrow. We can discuss it then."

An Air Purifier Gives Fresh Woodsy Tang

By Juliet Shelby

IF YOUR HUSBAND IS the kind who warbles Strauss in his bath, enjoys the clean woodsy scent of outdoor things, and prides himself above all else on his meticulous grooming, you can do no better than give him a new closet air purifier for Christmas.

You hang it on a hook in your closet like a pomander and not only will it keep your clothes fresh and fragrant as the North woods but it will discourage the [illegible] moth and banish the odor of cigarettes out of your fabrics.

We should be very particular during the winter months to keep our heavy garments clean.

One woman of my acquaintance always hangs the dress she has worn during the day by her open window.

Sachets help to keep your closet fresh and fragrant, but most closets require an air purifier before such dainty aids can spread their fragrance. So housewives will give a loud cheer when they learn that a closet air purifier has been perfected that combines the pleasant and health-giving aroma of pine with the [illegible] and deodorizing power of "paradichlorobenzene," a substance that government scientists claim is taboo with moths!

If you wish to know the name of this closet purifier and where it can be bought, phone Liberty [illegible] and ask for Miss Shelby. This information can also be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the [illegible] Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston.

Ambiguous Defense Play Sets Four-Spade Contract

By Josephine Culbertson

Many hands are muffed by declarer which could quite easily be made [illegible]. Sometimes the declarer muffs a hand because the nature of the cards he holds requires that he make some guess as to the [illegible] of a certain suit or perhaps as to his entire line of attack. More [illegible] he is deceived by [illegible] defensive play. It was such a play which brought about the defeat of South's four-spade contract in the hand below.

North, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

North:
♠9 6 4
♡K 7 5
♢K Q 10 9 5
♣A Q

West:
♠A 2
♡Q J 10 6
♢6 4 3
♣J 8 5 4

East:
♠J 8 5
♡A 9 4 3
♣10 7 3 2

South:
♠K Q 10 7 3
♢A J 7
♣K 9 6

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♢	Pass	1 ♠ (1)	Pass
2 (2)	Pass	3 ♠ (3)	Pass
4 ♠ (4)	Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) South is not quite strong enough to make a forcing bid of [illegible]. His One-over-One spade is 99 per cent forcing and South is not quite sure that with an absolute maximum North hand a game can be made. If North is too weak to rebid, the contract is perhaps best played at one spade.

(2) North is not sure whether the hand should be played at diamonds, spades or notrump. His [illegible] being a fairly strong second suit, he rebids them.

(3) Action must now be taken since North is strong enough to rebid his hand and the deal must be played at game. If North has nothing in spades there is probably enough top stuff to hold the fort at notrump.

(4) Three small cards is adequate support for a rebiddable suit.

In the play West opened the Queen of hearts, on which dummy played the King and East the Ace. The hearts were continued, South trumping the third round. Declarer could now afford to lose only one trump trick.

A small club was led to dummy's Ace and a small trump returned, on which South played the King. West, without a second of indecision, allowed the King to hold the trick. It seemed quite clear to West that South's trump holding must be at least as strong as King-Queen-Ten. If it were King-Queen-Jack no trick could be won or lost by the play of either the Ace or a small one. But if South's holding were the King-Queen-Ten with only two small ones East must have the guarded Jack. In this event the play of the Ace would probably induce South to gain entry once more to the dummy and finesse through East's Jack of trumps. In view of the hold-off, however, South might quite reasonably place the Ace in East's hand, lead a trump from the dummy, and go up with the Queen, hoping to find a doubleton Jack in the West hand. The hope was slight but it was the only one remaining, since South almost positively held both the diamond Ace and the club King.

As West had hoped, South was deceived by this play and led a club to dummy's Queen in order to lead another trump from the dummy. When East played low, South went up with the Queen, West winning with the Ace. East's Jack was now established for the fourth and setting trick.

Of course West could not be sure that South would make the wrong guess, but when a contract is undefeatable at double dummy, the defense can surely be said to have done its best when it has given the declarer the maximum opportunity to make the wrong guess.

While reluctant to discuss the surgical aspects of the operation, Mr. Beaven said that Dr. Winfred Funnell, noted ear specialist, must penetrate the brain when he operates and that the operation is one of the most delicate known to medical science.

"Last February," the unfortunate young woman's father explained, "Gertrude came home to spend a week-end with her mother and me at our Charlestown home at 7 Church court. She complained of great pain in her right ear.

"The next morning, Saturday, I made an appointment for her with Dr. Funnell, who said that she must go to the hospital Monday and be prepared for an operation. Sunday afternoon, he treated her again. The instant he had made an examination he pronounced it a case of mastoid.

"He asked if the school doctor had not made an examination. My daughter told him the doctor had not been called—that the nurse had advised a hot water bottle for the ear.

"Gertrude was operated on the following Thursday. There have been two subsequent operations. And now tomorrow's, but I can say no more. Please excuse me. It is not our daughter's beauty nor her health that concern her mother and I any more. It is her very life that is at stake tomorrow—and she is our only one."

61 ACCUSED OF RUM TAX FRAUD

By Associated Press

Montreal, Dec. 12—Police were detailed today to round up 61 persons, including officials of Distillers Corporation-Seagrams Limited, accused of defrauding the Dominion and Quebec governments of $5,000,000 in liquor smuggling operations.

Although the sum of $5,000,000 was specified in the blanket warrant, officials said the actual figure would probably prove far greater.

Names of only four of those mentioned in the warrants were made public, pending arrest of those sought. They are:

Sam Bronfman, president of the Distillers Corporation-Seagrams Limited; Allan, vice-president, and Harry and Abraham Bronfman.

Authorities said the charges against the Bronfman Brothers had no connection with the companies with which their name was associated.

Calling it the "biggest" liquor smuggling [illegible] in annals of the Dominion, officers added "and it may grow."

Let Socony Get Your Car Ready for Cold Weather

WEATHER MEN AGREE that it's going to be another hard Winter. And we're offering a friendly bit of advice to car owners . . . take extra precautions against cold weather this year.

You'll want a good anti-freeze, of course. But don't stop with that. Your engine—your gears—the chassis—every part of your car needs special protection for Winter.

That's why we have worked out the Socony Winter-proof Service. It's a complete 4-point system. It guards all the weak spots Winter so often finds. It gives you a better car when Spring comes—by protecting everything in advance.

And remember—Winter-proofing is a SOCONY Service. It calls for the complete, thoughtful, friendly service that the Flying Red Horse stands for. Get your car ready for hard Winter driving now—see the Socony dealer or station that is nearest to you.

THE FOUR POINTS OF SOCONY WINTER-PROOFING SERVICE

1 MAKE WINTER STARTING EASIER with Mobiloil Arctic in your crankcase. Flows freely at sub-zero temperatures. Reaches all parts quickly and prevents "dry" starts.

2 STIFF GEARS are dangerous. Take the "fight" out of cold-weather shifting with Mobiloil CW and EPW. Protects differential and transmission against the wear that comes when Summer oils harden.

3 A SQUEAKY CAR means that something is wearing too fast. Before Winter comes, have your car lubricated throughout with the special Winter grades of Mobilgrease.

4 CHOOSING AN ANTI-FREEZE involves many questions. Let the Socony man help you find the right one. He'll see that you are fully protected against freeze-ups—at the lowest practicable cost.

I am afraid that Mr. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace may have [illegible]

Robert E. Rogers

[illegible] which [illegible] approach to [illegible] This [illegible] God, [illegible] of the [illegible] emphasize [illegible] world and economic [illegible]

Now Mr. Wallace [illegible] Struggle for Power [illegible] Capitalism and Protestantism [illegible] that they [illegible] together. Economists are pretty universally agreed that the rise of Protestantism coincided with the [illegible] to the modern [illegible] Let me quote from Professor [illegible] book [illegible] "The Making of the Modern Mind."

Puritan View

[illegible] If God show you a way in which you may lawfully get more than in any other way, if you refuse [illegible] you cross one of the ends of your calling and you refuse to be God's steward. [illegible] It is clear how the Puritan [illegible] disgrace [illegible] on the sin of enjoying riches through wasteful and fruitless consumption combined to [illegible] amassing of wealth [illegible] a sacred duty.

"Next to the saving of his soul the tradesman's care and business is to serve God in his calling and to drive it as far as it will go."

Almost the complete opposite of the co-operative use of an economy of abundance. Well, a real politician—Mr. Farley, for instance—would not have mentioned a fact, however accepted, which would [illegible] millions of Methodists and Baptists, each, and all the other Protestant sects in proportion. They are not going to like Secretary Wallace's frankness.

On the other hand, although he also mentioned briefly the Catholics and the Jews, the former are going to point with pride to the encyclicals of Leo XIII and Pius IX, as popularized by Father Coughlin. They may even remember [illegible] Cardinal O'Connell, to whom the Michigan [illegible] unexampled severity the very wealthy among the [illegible] of his faith who do not use their wealth for the advancement of social justice. The Jews, famous for their great charities and social foundations, may also feel inclined to look askance at the Protestants after Secretary Wallace's words and to point out that the humanitarian laws of the Book of Leviticus furnish the earliest examples in history of an approach to the social attitude of social responsibility of the rich to the poor.

Trouble Feared

I think that Secretary Wallace would have driven in his point about the non-responsibility of the well-to-do much better if he had not named the Protestants. It will make trouble, I fear, among the ignorant who do not know much about the theory of economics and who are always eager to find a mote in their neighbor's eye without bothering much about the beam in their own eye.

Of course a man has the right to criticize his own people, his own class, his own church as he has not the right where others are concerned. He may have meant well, he may be [illegible] correct, but I suspect that Mr. Farley will presently inform him that it was pretty amateurish politics. The prophets never did care much for political expediency, anyway.

Excited in 4 Languages! Lily Pons in Boston

Marriage Is Long Way Off

TOO THRILLED OVER MOVIE WORK; HAS THREE-YEAR CONTRACT

By BETTY DI PESA

After the interview conducted in the suite of Miss Lily Pons at the Hotel Statler, we feel sure Miss Pons must leave the city amazed at the versatile, linguistic powers of the Boston press.

Encouraged by the smooth flow of the little prima donna's French, we summoned our rather vague vocabulary in that language to the fore. Another gal reporter, not to be outdone by a colleague, began spouting Spanish.

A cameraman, realizing no doubt that we were both a couple of pseudo-linguists and could be equaled in any language brought out some German he had acquired in the war.

Just to make it complete, Miss Margherita Tirindelli, secretary to the singer, contributed her native Italian.

And to put us all to confusion, Miss Pons answered each of us unequivocably in whatever language we were attempting to address her.

But from this melee of internationality we were able to learn that Miss Pons has signed a three-year contract with R. K. O. and that she will begin her first picture next June.

BRIDAL LONG WAY OFF

Concerning her cinematic career, the song artist who has thrilled royalty with her bird-like voice, remarked with typical Pons-like gestures:

"I-eeee am so-oooo exciting about my moving picture work."

In the meantime Miss Pons will journey to Paris and appear in a season of opera there, returning May 25.

As to affairs of the heart, Miss Pons declared she still is engaged to Fritz Von Der Becke but marriage is in the very distant future.

The reason given for postponement of her marriage is the careers of both, she said. Dr. Von Der Becke at present is buried with clerical work in Hamburg.

And Miss Pons, what with opera, movies, concert and radio is very much occupied.

Miss Pons has certain definite ideas about marriage and a home and they do not coincide with the husband being in one country and the wife in another.

Asked if she would then give up her career for romance, the singer answered definitely in the negative and said:

"For the moment, I must think only of my career.

"A career demands sacrifice. It is very difficult."

The famed coloratura is in Boston to appear at a musicale given under the auspices of the Boston School of Occupational Therapy.

LILY'S LOVE TO WAIT ON WORK

SOMERVILLE MAN HELD IN FORAY OF HOLDUPS

For six months Albert Benoit, 27, worked on CWA projects to support his wife and five children in Walnut street, Somerville.

When the rodeo was here [illegible] months ago he was injured in an effort to win $100 for riding a wild broncho.

Once he was shot by a mysterious assailant and again he was tied up with six other employes during a holdup of a milk plant in Somerville.

Today, according to Somerville police, he confessed that he was one of two taxicab bandits, whose system it was to hire a cab, truss up the driver with piano wire and stage a foray of holdups while the helpless driver lay in the back seat.

They said after questioning by Inspector Allen S. Butts, [illegible] Benoit told of 15 such holdups over a period of only two months. His arrest came in a Charlestown tavern after Paul J. Godwin [illegible] of Morrison avenue, Somerville, pointed him out as the man who had robbed him of $18.

THALBERG TO FILM LIFE OF CECIL RHODES, FAMED SOUTH AFRICAN HERO

Lights and Shadows

By George Holland

Walter Hampden's surname is Dougherty, a fact so uncommonly known as to have escaped the privacy of this [illegible] recently. The [illegible] interpreter of the drama [illegible] comes from Brooklyn, a [illegible] place for one who [illegible] his [illegible]

But it is surely good box-office to let the folks know that [illegible] true [illegible] Colonel A. J. Sheehan of the Colonial, whether Mr. Hampden is working his way for a pre-Christmas festival [illegible] next Monday night, will be grateful for the mention, because what brought this up was that the Colonel and myself were bemoaning the vanishing of the [illegible] American from the theater.

Here by the way is Mr. Hampden's repertoire next week at the Colonial: Monday, Wednesday matinee and Saturday evening, "Richelieu"; Tuesday and Friday evenings, "King Richard III"; Wednesday evening and Saturday matinee, "Hamlet"; Thursday, "Macbeth."

William Grady [illegible], author of a poem entitled "The Motion Picture Scout," and [illegible] start to the executive vice-president of one of the largest motion picture studios in Gotham, respectfully is invited to arrange an audition for two of the most amazing children I have seen on any platform. They are Paul McNamara, who is 4 and his brother, Billy, 7.

The younger has more rhythm than Cab Calloway. The children really sing and dance, are entirely unspoiled and before a sound-camera [illegible] emphatic opinion we can [illegible] should be [illegible]. They are in charge of a former musical comedy performer named Mrs. Gertrude Dean, of Roxbury. If this reads like a rave [illegible] intended. And before sundown, someone or several are expected to arrive to herald Noel Coward's "Point Valaine," which will open Christmas at the Colonial Theater . . . Mr. Coward, Elmer J. Walters tells us, visited the offices of Wee and Leventhal in New York and asked that the authors' play "Home Chat," which Wee and Leventhal planned to show in Boston the week after Christmas, be deferred until "Point Valaine" ends its Boston run. His request was granted, and Blanche Ring, in "Her Master's Voice" will play at the Hollis through the holidays.

Charles Laughton to Play Lead in Biographical Picture; Dixie Lee to Make Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service)

Los Angeles, Dec. 12—The romantic, colorful life of Cecil Rhodes, of the Kimberly diamond mines and the hero of South Africa will soon be ready for the screen. Irving Thalberg has read volumes on the life of Rhodes who went to South Africa in 1881 and did such big things for the country, besides making a fortune for himself. Thalberg has engaged Monckton Hoffe, English playwright, to combine all the data in a screen play.

Many stars have been considered for the role of Rhodes but Irving has now definitely made up his mind that Charles Laughton is best suited to the role. There is so much adventure, so much history and so much romance in Rhodes' life that it should make an interesting biographical movie.

Pretty Dixie Lee is planning a vacation for a few months from bringing up Crosby babies to have a screen career for herself. Bing, who thinks she is the prettiest and best, has given his consent to his wife's signing a contract with Paramount. He's proud of her and he [illegible] after presenting him with three husky boys, she deserves a chance in the movies. And when the girls who swarm to the theatres to hear Bing croon, see Mrs. Crosby, they'll realize why he is so happy at home. Dixie is attractive with a personality and given the right vehicle, well, there may be two stars in the Crosby family.

George Brent will not play the male lead in "Oil for the Lamps of China." That is definite and is on the [illegible] arrangement between Jack Warner and George. I am wondering if that means George [illegible] Brent's withdrawal, however, gives one of Warners' players a swell chance. John Eldredge, who did such a good piece of work in "Flirtation Walk" was [illegible] for the part and [illegible] it will be his. I am glad that he is being given such a chance because to my way of thinking he is a grand actor.

Will wonders never cease? [illegible] who made [illegible] spectacular nudist picture [illegible] was supposed to be looking around for another sensational [illegible] is going highbrow. Bryan plans to produce "Hamlet" and he is going to produce it just as Shakespeare wrote it. Of course "Hamlet" is a little long and will have to be a sort of [illegible] to get in all of the asides, the gravediggers' speeches and soliloquies and what have you. But Bryan says he won't cut it and [illegible] needs now is a perfect Hamlet. His choice: Robert Donat or Victor Jory. The only trouble with this is that both of them have other jobs.

I swear I just cannot remember all the names of the newcomers. They are talking about a girl named Jane Withers at the Fox Company and just so I won't be too dumb I'll have to take a look at "Bright Eyes," the Shirley Temple picture, and see if Miss Withers is as good as they think at Fox. At any rate, she has signed a long term contract and she will play one of the leads in Jesse Lasky's "Red-Heads on Parade." That reminds me that [illegible] Frances, who is also red-headed, will play herself in the Lasky opera.

Miss Christie in Recital

A concert of piano music on the Moor double keyboard piano was presented last evening at Jordan Hall by Winifred Christie.

Miss Christie has distinguished herself on concert stages in London, Paris, Munich and other European capitals and appeared in programs at the Hall of Science at the Chicago World's Fair. Her programs are chosen with care, and although there is an unavoidable tendency to concentrate upon the mechanics of the two keyboard piano rather than the artist, she reveals herself as a fine and sensitive musician.

Ancient State Dog-Law May Haunt Dog Racers; Ruth in Collins' Boots

'Sweep' Cheats Stopped Fuchs Rewards Rabbit Pro Gridders Win Out

By AUSTEN LAKE

THE NON-PROFESSIONAL DOG-LOVERS, those suckers for a pup's playful bark and the flirt of his fuzzy tail, are telling about a Massachusetts law, alive since 1715, which makes any pooch brought into this state an outlaw, subject to being shot on sight.

Austen Lake

This is a holdover law from the Colonial day when sheep-killing was a common nuisance and the pioneer fathers regarded dogs as No. 1 public enemies. Since then the law has been allowed to live as a museum piece, like the statute against whispering in church or forbidding female exposure between the chin and the insteps.

But unless the framers of the 1935 dog-racing bill were foresighted enough to sponge out the ancient law, it may yet rise from its tomb to embarrass the commercial dogmen who raise hounds by the herd, or swarm, for the racing market and tote them hither for purposes or sordid gain.

You can imagine the fluster it would cause at some Boston race meeting next summer if a dog-bigot should suddenly pull a gat and go to spraying the hounds with hot lead, while claiming sanctuary under the 1715 law.

Connie Fits Babe to Eddie's Old Shoes

A PILLOW STOMACHED GIANT with a beet shaped nose and a lean, melancholy man with silvery hair are leaning over the taff-rail of a homebound mail steamer from Hawaii today.

One is Babe Ruth, the ball player who became a national treasure. The other is Connie Mack, the old testament character of the game. They are returning from a baseball tour of the Orient.

Since last season, when Ruth snooped after Joe McCarthy's job as manager of the Yankees, he has become a problem child in his league, so that the owners in New York today are studying what to do with him.

I hear from a reliable source that Connie will name Babe his first assistant with the Athletics next year, to occupy the same spot that Eddie Collins held before he came to Boston as curator of Tom Yawkey's ball plant.

Connie Mack intends to stay on as Athletics' manager until his aging sinews fail. The Babe, says my news-source, will receive $25,000 and double as field-lieutenant and part-time player.

ON THE HEELS OF A RECENT "Parade" item, concerning the flood of bogus Sweepstake coupons that have been foisted on the public for many years, the Federal postal authorities have uncovered headquarters for the distribution of the phonies in Cleveland.

My estimate of the percentage of counterfeit Sweeps tickets in relation to the genuine ones, was 3 to 1. The postal authorities make it at least 10 counterfeits to one original, indicating that the public is bilked out of $10 for every $1 that reaches honest hands.

Without wishing to disillusion the folk who invest a few dollars each year in a beautiful dream that they might scoop up a fortune in prize money, I merely warn investors to deal only with accredited Sweeps agents, known personally.

Insist on a return receipt, and if in due time none is forthcoming, go to stalking that agent with a baseball bat.

IN THE MAJOR LEAGUES the mortality rate among players who were loving roommates of a newly made manager is very high. Such palsy-walsy bedfellows as Joe Cronin and Sam Jones of the Senators, Pie Traynor and Larry French of the Pirates, Bill Terry and Fred Lindstrom of the Giants, and Frank Frisch and Jimmy Wilson of the Cardinals, are examples of one-time chamber sharers who are now bitter enemies.

When Joe, Pie, Bill and Frank were brevetted from the ranks, they promptly sold their ex-roommates over the hill, Jones to the White Sox, French to the Giants, Lindstrom to the Pirates and Wilson to the Phillies.

Result is that the old chums and roomies now pass in sullen silence when they meet, tip-tilting their snoots, though in Frisch and Wilson's case they pour each over with a mutual exchange of abuse.

Rabbit Looks Fuchs' Gift Horse in Mouth

JUDGE EMIL FUCHS, to whom the cardinal human virtue is loyalty, has made a cozy corner for Rabbit Maranville with the Braves. Admiring Rabbit's heroism in submitting to repeated bone-scraping and resetting of his injured shin, Fuchs has promoted him to a coaching job, firing Johnny Evers to find Rab's salary.

When I telephoned to the little rooster today his tart reply was, "Coach hell! I'm going to play." Now verging 43, an athletic age when most men put away their playthings and retire to some sunny nook, Rabbit refuses to grow up.

For 20-odd years he has burned his physical candle at both ends, like Edna St. V. Millay's verse, which runs:

"I burn my candle at both ends, it will not last the night. But O, my friends, and O, my foes, it sheds a lovely light."

THE BUSINESS OF PROFESSIONAL FOOTBALL, until lately a stepchild of the college game, has gathered customer appeal this fall. Chicago Bears announce a profit of nearly $100,000, which is a lot of funds even in sports.

This contrasts with the whimpers that most college athletic associations are making over deficits, which range from a few hundreds to the University of Pitt's $535,944, which is a claiming deficit aimed at shooing away the county auditors.

The professional football magnates have one great advantage over the college magnates. They do not have to buy real estate and build huge concrete bowls for their games.

The baseball people did that for them long ago. And the pros buy up the best college stars, who come ready-to-wear, freshening up their lineups each year with famous alumni.

The college folk do not pay any players salaries, but then the pros, which do, have no obligations to the papas and mamas of their players and have no howling, disgruntled grads mailing in shouts and wails.

KAMINSKY IN STAR ROLE AT GARDEN

By Bill Grimes

Through their victory over the New York Americans at the Garden, the Bruins retain a 50 per cent interest in first place of the American Division, for the Chicago Blackhawks, co-leaders, shut out Smith Jack Adams' Red Wings

After piling up a four goal lead on the Amerks, the Bruins' defense became porous, allowing the visitors to beat Tiny Thompson for three tallies in the final period.

Offensively, the Bruins were at their best. With a few breaks, they would have given "Shrimp" Worters the worst beating he has ever received here

One of the most encouraging signs that the Bruins are serious contenders for Stanley cup honors was the smartness of Max Kaminsky's combination play

Not since the days when Cooney Weiland was the Bruins' stellar play-maker have the Boston fans seen the equal of Kaminsky.

Kaminsky figured in both of the goals scored while he was in action. He started the play that put the Bruins out in front half way through the opening period, and in the next chapter he passed out to Dit Clapper for the third Boston tally.

Although they appreciated these efforts, the Bruin fans were far more impressed with the numerous passes he gave Clapper and Barry which did not result in goals.

In the second period, Kaminsky and Barry dashed down the left side of the rink about ten feet apart Over came the American defense.

Out of the corner of his eye, Kaminsky must have spotted Clapper flying down the right lane, for as soon as he saw that the path was wide open for Dit he passed across and just far enough forward to make a perfect play. Clapper, however, was wide with his drive.

A few minutes later, Kaminsky and Barry staged one of the best pieces of combination play the Bruins have shown in years.

Barry took the puck into the attacking zone along the left wing board and gave Kaminsky a snappy pass. This was immediately returned forward and in the open.

Barry gathered the puck well inside the Amerks' defense, and, but for a spectacular save by Worters, would have beaten the great little goalie.

Due to the fact that Kaminsky passes to the left or right with equal skill, he is bad news for defense men. This youngster will be a great favorite with the Boston hockey public and should become one of the best play makers in the N. H. L. when he is more familiar with Barry and Clapper's style of play. Bear in mind that he had never played with these great flankmen until last Friday

Tiny Thompson was entitled to another shutout In all probability, it is just as well, now that the Bruins have hung up another victory, that the Bruin defense slipped enough to allow the Amerks to score

Under the present day system of defense play, a goal minder has plenty on his mind without worrying over shut outs.

Through the absence of body checks attacking players are allowed to sift in on the goalies with great frequency, and the rear guards are leading a tough existence

Les Canadiens furnished the biggest upset of the season when they knocked over Tommy Gorman's flying Maroons, 4 to 1

STUDY IN EXPRESSIONS. The Rangers continue to sink and are shown wearing lugubrious expressions as the Maple Leafs poked through a score on them in New York yesterday. Aitkenhead, the goalie, is prone on the floor and Earl Siebert, defense man, is at the net. Hal Cotton of the Leafs is waving his hands in delight at the goal. The Leafs won, 8 to 1. THE LITTLE GENERAL MARCHES ON

Johnny Magee Continues Dissertation On Wonders of Japanese Athletics

By Walter Kiley

Johnny Magee, Bowdoin College diplomat, waxes eloquent over Japan's compulsory system of physical education for its boys and girls

Only recently returned from a tour of the Orient as manager and coach of the American track team Magee tells about the thousands of the nation's school children who daily are put through a definite program of calisthenics tending to strengthen the physical and mental backbone of the nation

"What impressed me particularly is that the country is interested only in amateur sports," states the Bowdoin coach.

"Its athletes are all bona-fide amateurs. Its amateur federations, the Nippon A. A. F. as an example, is composed of prominent sportsmen who are thoroughly versed in the rules and regulations of amateur conduct.

"The country is developing fast in sport, especially so in track, baseball and swimming. The Japanese are quick to learn. They are apt imitators.

"But, unlike the parrot, these little men are never content to copy, they are always ambitious to excel those whose style they may be employing.

"A typical proof of this is found in their swimming. For more than a thousand years, the Japanese were steeped in the tradition of the famous Meiji Jingo system of swimming which calls for the use of the side stroke.

"But when they saw Johnny Weissmuller using the crawl stroke with such tremendous success in the 1920 Olympics, they immediately scrapped their style and took up the crawl.

"The result was that they were able to win the 1932 Olympic swimming title at Los Angeles."

Johnny went on to tell about arriving in Tokio at midnight. An air raid was in progress, one of several scheduled as part of their flying program.

The city was in total darkness. Windows of homes and hotels were covered with burlap. Lights were [illegible] hed Streets were [illegible] order of the [illegible] the American track [illegible] up to their rooms and ordered to bed at once

The next morning, Johnny was awakened at 6 o'clock by loud shouting across the street. Looking out he witnessed several thousand children m[illegible] the gates of a huge playground [illegible] for them to open so that they could play baseball

"All the boys and girls were uniformed. The authorities dictate what the youth will wear Rich and poor must dress alike. There is no class distinction between the children

"The boys wear blue shorts and blue coats and vests with a row of brass buttons down the front. Peaked caps of blue top off the ensemble.

"The girls have black stockings and black low cut shoes and a pleated skirt. Their blouses are either pink, white or blue All must wear one color one week and change to another the next.

"Many of Japan's sports events are free to the public. Some of the bigger events, such as our track meets and the games with Babe Ruth's barnstorming ball players, cost about 30 cents.

"They have several gigantic stadiums, two of them seating 65,000 in Tokio, not 50 yards away from each other. On one side they will have concrete seats. The other side is nothing but grassy slopes, where the spectators sit on the ground.

"Hsinking in Manchuko, Manchuria, has a new stadium now under construction. When completed, it will accommodate 100,000. It is part of a five year plan, in which almost an entirely new city will arise. It has been in the making for two years. In three more it will be finished

"It has a 60-foot wide board track, almost three times as wide as most of ours. The track is 600 meters long and, in the winter, the inclosure can be converted into a skating rink

"Inside the board oval is a cinder track of 400 meters, built under the most modern specifications."

The Last Half Mile---

CUNNINGHAM'S DUEL WITH 'BONNY' WILL LIVE FOREVER

(Ed. Note—There have been moments of drama and tragedy, pathos and comedy in the fields of sports during the past year. Each day, staff writers of the Boston American will tell of the most thrill-packed moments in sports they have either reported or seen during the active year which is rushing to its completion. The third is herewith presented.)

By Walter Kiley

Outside it was bitterly cold. Inside New York's Madison Square Garden it was warm and comfortable. Warmer perhaps than comfortable, for 16,000 thrill-hungry track followers taxed the huge arena to its bulging capacity.

Ten thousand more stormed the barricaded portals and battled police in a vain effort to gain entrance.

The public, with a finely developed sense for the sensational, seemed to realize it was about to witness an unfolding drama. It had long anticipated the clash between Glen Cunningham of Kansas and Bill Bonthron of Princeton, nation's greatest milers.

Here at last in the much heralded Baxter mile of the New York A. C. track carnival, the curtain was to rise on the opening [illegible] of the season's classic struggle for supremacy.

Experts both here and abroad had argued their respective merits. They had nothing but comparisons on which to base their claims. The Kansan and the Princetonian had been wary. They sidestepped each other at the B. A. A. games at Boston Garden, and once again in the popular Millrose games at Madison Square Garden.

Each Was Victim of Youthful Accident

Cunningham's 1933 record spoke volumes for his ability. First in 29 of 33 races, second the other four times. His 4.12 mile at New York was the fastest of that season. He was finally awarded the James E. Sullivan trophy for 1933 as the outstanding athlete of the year. He just nosed out Bonthron, 611 votes to 610.

Bonthron startled the nation when he won the 1500 meters in 3.51 at the intercollegiates at Harvard Stadium, returning a short time later to breast the tape ahead of a fast 800-meter field in the exceptional time of 1.53.5, the most brilliant double since the days of John Paul Jones.

Six weeks later he blasted the existing mile world record when he turned in a 4.08.7 performance on the outdoor Princeton track, albeit in so doing he ran second to Oxford's Jack Lovelock, who did 4.07.6 for a world record.

Cunningham and Bonthron were the principals on this late February evening. Gene Venzke of Penn, who had raced to the indoor mark of 4.10 in the 1932 Baxter mile, was one of the lesser lights of the cast. Glenn Dawson of Oklahoma and Frank Crowley of Manhattan were mere figures in the background.

Watch Each Other Too Closely in First Half

Venzke's 4.10 mark was their goal.

The quintet lined up. The starter's gun barked.

The crowd sat back in breathless silence. Dawson set the early pace. The first half wound on in disappointing fashion. The time was 2.14, far too slow for a record breaking achievement.

Cunningham and Bonthron had forgotten all but each other. Each was afraid to make a serious bid. They jockeyed for position. For the most part the Princetonian was content to dog the Kansan's footsteps, hanging at his shoulder.

At the sixth lap, Cunningham let out a burst of speed. The crowd roared. He jumped Dawson and took the lead. Bonthron was in close pursuit, Venzke only a step behind.

The trio ran the next four laps like a team, the pace growing ever greater, the margin of difference staying ever the same.

The roar of the gun on the final lap. The backstretch where Bonthron made his bid. Cunningham stood him off, both were in top flight. The suspense was nerve wracking, heart stopping.

The crowd on its feet, 16,000 voices crying themselves hoarse.

Hysteria swept the multitude as Bonthron dipped deep into his reservoir of courage and reserve and came off the final banked turn into the homestretch with a definite challenge. [illegible] he crept until he was side by side with his rival [illegible] yards from the tape.

Together they swept into the tape. Or was it Bonthron's [illegible] chest to break the worsted in that last great dying gesture which returned him victor by less than three inches.

On continued Bonthron as his pace slackened and finally petered out. But down went Cunningham, hurtling to the track only a yard beyond the finish [illegible] he broke stride and lost consciousness.

Three Under 2.00 for Second Half

And in the van only a yard or two behind was Venzke, the forgotten man whose feat was equally amazing but overlooked in the heat of the leading duel.

The time of 4.14 was comparatively slow and in no way endangered Venzke's established mark. But at the time this was of little moment in the light of this epic battle of personalities.

The fact is that all three were well under 2 minutes for the second half, Bonthron being clocked in 58.3 for the final quarter, an amazing performance. Cunningham less than one-tenth second slower.

Four times more they clashed during the indoor and outdoor season. Cunningham atoning for his first defeat as he won by the same margin of three inches in a world record-breaking performance in the 1500 meters the following week.

Three times was Bonthron the victor and twice Cunningham. Yet the question of superiority is still an open question, the outstanding victory being the Kansan's 40-yard margin as he bested his arch rival in world record mile figures of 4.07.06 at Princeton during the summer.

Yet none of these latter meetings, which wrote new track history, new attendance records and presaged phenomenal achievements on both indoor and outdoor tracks, can ever make those 16,000 spectators forget the great Baxter mile of 1934.

The costume competition for men and women brings a colorful note to the program. Men's and women's shoe skate combinations have been donated by the South End Hardware Company, 1095 Washington street and 130 Federal street, Boston.

Seven speed skating races are listed, a 220 for boys 12 years and under, class B 440 for girls, 440 open for women, class A 440 for women, class A 880 for men, class A one mile for men and class B 440 for men. Entries for these races close at midnight with Ben [illegible], Olympic Skating Club, Boston Arena.

LORETTA WALSH IN

There are no entry fees for any of the events, other than the price of admission, 40 cents. Reserved seats are available at 75 cents and one dollar. Tickets may be purchased at the Arena box office, or at headquarters of the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund, 294 Devonshire street.

Among the speed skating already entered are Loretta Walsh, Mary Donnellan, Grace Wolfe, and Virginia Alvarez, Al Surrette, Ted [illegible], Art MacDonald, Howard Adams, and Roger Corey, all from the Olympic Skating Club.

B. U. ICE TEAM FACES YALE

New Haven, Ct., Dec. 12—Yale's veteran hockey team opens its season against Boston University at the Arena here tonight. The Blue expects quite a bit of trouble as the Terriers always provide stiff opposition.

Last year the Boston sextet held Yale scoreless for 50 minutes before the Eli could come through with a victory. Tonight, however, Coach York has four veteran lines and plenty of strength to throw at the Terriers.

Boston University's hopes rest largely with its famous forward line of co-captains John Lex and Pete Rowe, together with Russ Smith.

GAMES TONIGHT

Jewels vs. Visitations at Arcadia Hall, Brooklyn.

By Bob Ahearn

Standout cage game on tonight's program is scheduled for the Lynn Arena. The Boston Trojans, fresh from their thrilling win over the Jersey City Reds, combat the Lynn All Stars, led by Sam Shapiro, in an exhibition fray.

There'll be no love lost in this game. Shapiro tried out for the Trojans earlier in the season, but was given his papers soon after the season opened.

He is confident of pinning a defeat on the Trojans, and has a group of one-time scholastic and college hoopsters playing, including Fink Rae and Frank Gaffney.

The next league tilt is booked for the Boston Arena, with the New Britain Jackaways furnishing the opposition. Coming with the Connecticut quintet is Dutch Denhert, famed as a member of the original Celtics.

Johnny Dixon's Norwood five plays host to the Trojans on Saturday evening in an exhibition game.

One game is on tap for tonight in the Greater Boston Amateur League. The Irwin Club entertains the Presentation hoopsters at the East Boston high gymnasium. Bob Smith has been elected to lead the Malden City Club. He formerly captained Brockton high.

Philadelphia Colored Giants are down to meet the Pere Marquette cagesters a week from Saturday. The South Boston team, managed by Joe Kelly, opens its home season Saturday at the South Boston high court. St. Thomas Club of Jamaica will engage the Peres.

Eastern board officials will referee the Park Department League games. Each team registered will be classified according to age, weight and ability. Entries close on December 15 with Billy Mullen.

O'Brien Leads B. C. Eleven

Joe O'Brien of Hyde Park, an end, will lead Boston College on the gridiron next year. He is a junior.

O'Brien prepared at Hyde Park high, where he played tackle on the undefeated 1930 eleven.

MAX BAER BUDDY BAER

A king and the boy who may be crown prince of the ring world come to Boston on December 21, when Heavyweight Champ Max Baer referees and Buddy Baer fights, at the Boston Garden. Max, and ex-Heavy Champs Jack Sharkey and Jack Dempsey will referee, and the nation's best fighters will battle, in this great show. NAVY MAY GET OUELLETTE

Lawrence, Dec. 12—Henry Ouellette may not go to Columbia after all.

The all-scholastic halfback from Lawrence High school plans to take the entrance examinations to the United States Naval Academy in the spring. Beyond that he has made no college plans.

Ouellette recently was acclaimed the "most valuable player" of the school football year by a state committee.

GERMAINE WINS MAT CROWN

A new champion was crowned at Charlie Gordon's weekly mat tourney at Mechanics Building.

Ted Germaine, the South Boston he-man, wrested the light heavyweight title from Tony Papalino in a two out of three fall match which had the fans on edge right up to the closing frame.

The deciding fall was registered in 43 seconds, somewhat of a record in local mat circles, after a series of rams. Papalino won the first in 12.41 with a top body press while Germaine took the second in 17.02 with a giant swing and body press.

Gil La Cross defeated Bill Brooks in the semi-final, one fall, 21.09, body press, while Melsheka took the special go in 18.38 from Jack Ellis with a top body scissors.

Senor Lopez defeated Leo Leverence, body scissors and wrist lock, 7.49; with the remaining four prelims resulting in 15 minute draws. They included Henry Manseau and Cannonball Grange, Young Dempsey and Dr. Altshuler, Jose Firpo and Winn Robbins, and Dick Bre[illegible] and Buck Jone[illegible].

Morris H. C. Captain

Worcester, Dec. 12—Nick Morris, star halfback and a member of the junior class, is the new 1935 Holy Cross football captain. Morris prepared at Boston College high school.

HARVARD ROUTS TECH, 10 TO 0

Harvard's hockey howitzer blasted the M. I. T. sextet to all corners of the Arena in the Crimson's opening game, winning 10-0.

For 40 minutes George Owen's "Milkmen" fought gallantly and the fast skating first Harvard line, comprised of Arthur Duffey, Al Dewey and Bill Lincoln, blinked the red light only thrice in that time.

In the final period Coach Stubbs ordered four men down the ice to bombard Patten Steiger, the Tech goalie.

Captain Bill Watts sank two shots, and George Ford, who had been out of the scoring picture, found the strings for two more. Seven goals within 12 minutes was the net result of the fierce attack.

Mike Hovanian and Bill Watts were the Crimson standouts in the lopsided victory.

It was a rough game, into the staggering total of 22 penalties being meted out.

N. E. A. A. A. U. Chief Back From Miami Brown as a Nut

By Bill Grimes

According to the Amerks loquacious Tommy Gorman has his Montreal Maroons flying at a pace which will carry them through any N. H. L. opposition. Then how about Les Canadiens . . . Art Chapman, the former Bruin, is out of the game with a torn knee cartilage or a chipped bone. The exact nature and extent of Chappie's injury will not be determined until an X-Ray has been taken.

Mel Heath, Jr., has entered the insurance business with his father, so of course, he will have some time to devote to golf next season . . . It's said that Ott Heller and Art Somers, Rangers, are on the auction block. They were to have departed from New York with Vic Ripley, and it is suspected that Col. Hammond stepped in and blocked the deal.

Lloyd Jackson, who played with the Amerks last night, did not return to New York with the club. He was on loan from New Haven and Manager Frank Corroll ordered him to remain here and join the Eagles tomorrow for the Bruin Cubs game at the Arena . . . Received a card from Ken Cook, professional at the South Shore C. C. from Hollywood, Fla., stating that the Cooks are doing all right by themselves . . .

Bill Kenney, president of the N. E. A. A. A. U., is back from Miami, sporting a coat of tan and in the well known "pink" . . . Harry Oliver, Red Conn, Art Chapman and Bob Gracie and their families are all living out on Long Island, N. Y. . . . Four Canadian amateurs who received a tryout at Lester Patrick's Winnipeg school during the training season of the Rangers are with the Brooklyn Crescents.

The United States immigration service deported six amateurs brought into Detroit from Canada recently, while a year ago the United States immigration service agents swooped down on Chicago and made a complete clean out of Canadians imported to play hockey in the Windy City. Now the Detroit and Chicago trend is toward American amateurs . . . Last summer Manager Ike Boone of the Toronto Maple Leaf baseball team brought his sister up from Alabama when there was an opening in the Queen City ball club office. She lasted three days, and then was deported by the Canadian immigration authorities.

Boston College is represented by a strong hockey squad this season. Maroon and Old Gold adherents will turn out for the opening game with Northeastern Friday night at the Arena. Get behind a good team, Eagles . . . Tom Keady, one of the country's outstanding football coaches, is in great demand as a basketball official . . . As is Win Karlson.

A year ago the Iowa-Iowa State game drew 28,000 in Iowa City, and the Hawkeyes handed the "Staters" $8000; but this fall the Hawkeyes received $9000 for an 18,000 crowd in Ames. Iowa State now believes that it was paid in the dark . . . Already the New York Americans have played two games this week, and they have three more listed between now and Sunday. After the second of their home and home games with the Bruins tomorrow night they will trip up to Toronto and then out to Detroit.

If you ever spy Hazen McEssy, Marquette guard and co-captain, across a prop table, ease yourself right out of the game, for "Mac" won every toss last season for the Hilltoppers . . . Charlie Sands, who was acquired from the Maple Leafs is on his way to stardom with the Bruins. Keep your eye on the Stewart, Beattie-Sands line, for it will go places . . . "Doc" Brown did such efficient work for George Marshall's Redskins that he stamped himself as one of the country's leading trainers. He would be a money saving proposition for a big league ball club . . .

The Interscholastic Hockey League gets underway Saturday at the Arena . . . It's one of the best take-ins off the hockey public.

Can it be that the depression did not hit Montreal? Cecil Hart wrote Walter Brown, manager of the Boston Olympics, that he would gladly bring his Verdun team here for a mere $600. Be your blood-pressure, Cecil. Confidentially, the Verdun sextet is some hockey club. With Sir Cecil as pilot it would be a great attraction here. But not for six hundred iron men.

Johnny Magee, the Bowdoin track coach who has a penchant to become the world's most extensive traveler, is in town. Get Johnny to tell you about his whys and wherefores about the Japanese as jumpers. He made a very careful study of the Japs during his recent visit to the Orient . . . Freddie Corcoran is trying to arrange a golf match between Jesse P. Guilford, the former national and state amateur and state open titleholder, and John Bernardini, professional at the Charles River C. C. Big Jesse is reticent as to the outcome of the match but he will give odds that Bernardini will out-talk him.

Now they are saying the Princeton and Northwestern will meet on the gridiron in '36. And Chicago and Nebraska will engage on their first football encounter next season . . . But for the asinine rule barring any college player who played professional football from acting as coach of a Big Ten team, Red Grange would have received Conference offers. Looks as if Red will wind up with University of Florida . . .

The new Dartmouth Club will hold its initial luncheon at the Parker House December 17. Get behind this project, you Wah-Who-Wahs.

BAER, DEMPSEY, SHARKEY HELP BASKET FUND

By Jack Conway

Boston's greatest boxing show will be staged at the Boston Garden on December 21 by the Goodwin A. C.

It will be for the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American and will bring together the most amazing ring attractions ever offered in this city.

Max Baer, world heavyweight champion, Jack Dempsey and Jack Sharkey, former world champions, will act as referees in this brilliant boxing carnival.

Boxing Commissioners Dan Kelley and Peter Carr have given special permission for Baer, Dempsey and Sharkey to referee. The regular officials of the Massachusetts Boxing Commission will work in other bouts, and will be paid their usual compensation.

Buddy Baer, younger brother of the mighty punching Max, will toss his thunderous right hand socks in a special six-round bout.

ALL-STAR CAST

Matchmaker Rip Valenti has contracts for the services of some of the leading boxers in the East. He will name his full card within a few days.

Included in the list of boxers with whom Valenti has been dickering are Tony Shucco, New England light heavyweight champion; Harry Devine, New England welterweight champion; Lou Brouillard, former world welterweight and middleweight champion, Werther Arcelli, conqueror of Andy Callahan in a bout for the New England welterweight title, and Patsy Pirroni, who licked Johnny Risko in Cleveland on Monday night.

George V. Brown, general manager of the Garden, and Ray Cass, head of the boxing department at the Garden, helped make it possible to bill this great show.

The Goodwin A. C. did not believe either the Arena or Mechanics Building would be large enough to care for the thousands of persons who would wish to attend this show.

GARDEN CO-OPERATES

The Christmas Basket Fund committee and Rip Valenti explained their difficulty to the Garden management.

"I haven't got any objection to this show being staged in the Garden," said Ray Cass. "It is a marvelous attraction and will do much to boom boxing."

The matter was then placed before General Manager George V. Brown. He concurred with Cass.

"The show should sell out the Garden," said Brown, "which will mean plenty of cheer for the poor on Christmas. I am making this concession to the Goodwin A. C. because it is giving a percentage of the receipts to the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American."

Bruin Cub Host to Boys, Girls

Good news for girls and boys!

The management of the Bruin Cubs announced today that all boys and girls accompanied by an adult will be admitted free to the Cubs-New Haven hockey game at the Arena tomorrow night upon payment of federal tax of 5 cents.

It will only be necessary for the adult to purchase his own ticket. Frank Ryan, publicity director for the Cubs, says it should be a fathers and sons night.

The Bruins may later decide to do the same thing at one of their games, according to Ryan.

Coaches Silent on Casey's Remarks

By International News Service

New York, Dec. 12—The recent statement by Eddie Casey, retired Harvard coach, in which he intimated that winning football can be achieved in colleges only by shutting the eyes to scholastic requirements and offering "special inducements" to athletes, brought forth a number of enlightening remarks by members of the New York coaching fraternity today.

For example:

LOU LITTLE, coach at Columbia: "Say I couldn't be located."

CHICK MEEHAN, coach at Manhattan: "Mr. Meehan is making a tour of the country."

PROF. PHILLIP O. BADGER, chairman of board of athletic control at N. Y. U.: "No comment."

EDWARD A. ELLIOTT, director of athletics at Columbia: "No comment."

JIM CROWLEY, coach at Fordham: "Please say that I am in Siberia."

BENNY FRIEDMAN, coach at C. C. N. Y.: "Mr. Casey is a fine [illegible]"

B. U. Five Plays Vermont Friday

After clashing with Dartmouth and Harvard on alien courts, Boston University's quintet plays its first home game of the season at the Arena gymnasium Friday night against University of Vermont.

The Terriers will be at full strength, although it was believed for a while that Captain Al Mathers and Elmer Bussell would be unable to start.

In a preliminary game, the Boston University freshman five will open its season against the Salem Normal School quintet.

WORTHINGTON WILSON'S BEST AT CHARLES TOWN

Mr. Boston Says:—

McCoy on the Spot
Zarynoff's $1000 Forfeit
Macaluso's Big Bout

By Jack Conway

IS BOB "Bibber" McCoy's face red?

Maybe yes, and maybe no.

Anyhow "Bibber" hasn't made any reply to Count Zarynoff's challenge for a bout for the New England heavyweight wrestling championship.

Mr. Boston

The Count put $1000 on the line as a forfeit. It is held by the Boston Evening American. It calls for Zarynoff's appearance in the ring against McCoy and a stipulation that the grand note ride as a side bet.

It is a long time since any wrestler bet $1000 he could lick another. In fact, some folks have become so conservative they wouldn't wager $1000 they were alive.

I think McCoy will have a miserable Christmas if he doesn't agree to meet the Count. The latter used to ride a horse back in the days when he was one of the Czar's private guards. He may hop aboard Billy Ames' Longitude and ride over to Cambridge and have it out with McCoy in Harvard Square.

Maybe "Bibber" hasn't answered the challenge because he hasn't got $1000 in cash. I know a lot of perfectly good citizens who are exactly $999 short of having $1000.

O'Dell Highly Rated

"Red" O'Dell, who clashes with "Rebel Bob" Russell at the Arena tonight in a best two falls out of three match, is highly rated as a grappler. He hails from Hollywood, Cal., and has caused more commotion in the film colony than even Ann Harding. They say O'Dell is the toughest grappler ever to come out of California, and that he will make Russell realize he has a real battle on his hands.

O'Mahoney Gets Offers

FEW FOREIGN athletes have received as many offers as have been tendered to Daniel O'Mahoney, Irish heavyweight wrestling sensation. He is on his way to the United States on the Bremen. He will be met in New York tomorrow by every prominent American sports promoter. The Irish sensation will be able to write his own ticket as far as matches are concerned.

Paul Bowser's offer of a $100,000 guarantee tops the list. This offer is for six matches. If Bowser succeeds in signing O'Mahoney to a contract, the bouts will be staged in Boston.

Bowser will meet O'Mahoney when the Bremen docks and will invite him to come to Boston as his guest to see the world's title mat bout between Ed Don George and Len Macaluso which will be held at the Garden on Friday night.

Macaluso's Title Dream

MACALUSO passed up all kinds of flattering football offers so that he could devote all of his time to wrestling. He is confident he will beat George tomorrow night, and then eliminate Jim Londos.

Macaluso isn't adverse to clashing with O'Mahoney. He recognizes the ability of the Irish sensation but thinks he can knock him off with a flying tackle. O'Mahoney has never been called upon to meet a wrestler who used a flying tackle.

There is considerable interest in the semi-final on Friday night. It will feature "Bull" Martin against Everett Marshall.

Wrestling, like boxing, is picking up in interest. The Jim Londos-Dick Shikat wrestling bout in the New York Garden on Monday night drew $20,000.

Gianferante Blows In Miami Tourney

Miami, Fla., Dec. 12—Jerry Gianferante's hopes for a high spot in the Miami open tournament had faded today after the Lexington, Mass., boy carded a second round 84.

His 36-hole total was 157, having carded a 73 on his first round.

HAIR TRIGGER RAZOR SHARP IN SECOND

By Dave Wilson

(Selections Made for Fast Track)

BEST BET—Worthington.

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 12—Worthington, a winner here last Saturday, is picked to repeat his triumph and the outstanding bet on the card arranged for this track tomorrow.

FIRST RACE

APATHY, FAIR VERBENA, FOXTEE.

APATHY should be able to beat this sort of opposition. FAIR VERBENA has shown some good efforts and should offer the contention. FOXTEE will have enough left to win the show.

SECOND RACE

HAIR TRIGGER, UMA, HOSAIN

HAIR TRIGGER, scratched out of the card yesterday, has but to run to his past race to trim this sort. UMA has been working well of late and should be the runnerup. HOSAIN has possibilities and should take what is left.

THIRD RACE

SUPREME MISS, CHANGEABLE, GENUINE

SUPREME MISS looks as though the proper spot has been found for her. CHANGEABLE is of uncertain quality but may provide the contention. GENUINE has run some good races and may finish in the money.

FOURTH RACE

Cora Kay, Overwood, Miss Cyllene

CORA KAY can make the grade in this event under the proper handling. OVERWOOD has disappointed before, but may be stirred to real energy for the place award. MISS CYLLENE looks sufficiently promising to take the show.

FIFTH RACE

Worthington, Triolet, Caloric

WORTHINGTON trimmed Triolet on Saturday, although Triolet was taken wide at the head of the stretch and lost by a short margin. TRIOLET won his next start, but Worthington looks to have the edge and should repeat the last triumph. CALORIC is favored to take down the show.

SIXTH RACE

SOMBRO, THIS BLAY, PLAY BILL

Not too much class here but SOMBRO rates an edge over the others. THIS PLAY and PLAY BILL ought to divide the rest of the spoils.

SEVENTH RACE

SANDY JOE, POMPESTIAN, GO AN TELL

Another cheap field with the choice a difficult one considering the calibre of the horses. But SANDY JOE figures a trifle the best with POMPESTIAN and GO AN TELL the second and third choices.

McCoy Still on Hunt for Center

While Al McCoy, Husky basketball coach, is confident that his present club will beat the record of nine wins out of 13 games made by the '33 quintet, he is still in search of a tall athlete who can play the center position.

The Northeastern team beat Brown easily, although both Mart Rice and Ted Bialkowski were outjumped at the pivot post. Both boys are smaller than the average college center, and each is a natural guard.

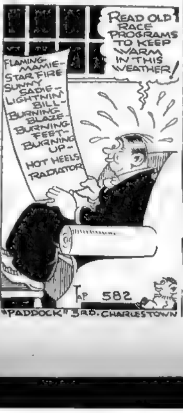
The newest dribbler to be tried at the midpost is Alex Fraser, a sophomore from Milton.

McCoy is also looking forward to the results of the mid-year exams which should free Warren Cushman, six-foot frosh center last year, from the ineligibility list.

Meanwhile Northeastern meets Clark at Worcester Saturday night, and McCoy may start either Fraser or Charlie Whitney, another center candidate, at the jump spot.

Two reserves, Johnny Barone, a forward, and Jay Hart, a back, have a chance of winning first-string jobs.

TAP'S TIPS



Racing Commissioners' 'Drug Rule' Has Teeth

By Associated Press

Jersey City, N. J., Dec. 12—Racing commissioners of five States resumed today the task of creating a uniform code for horse racing throughout the country after having taken one big step toward stamping out the "doping" evil.

Members of the rules codification committee of the National Association of Racing Commissioners agreed yesterday that all trainers whose horses show evidence of having been stimulated shall be ruled off the turf, with a few specific exceptions.

They then put the issue up to the trainers by recommending that stalls be constructed so as to provide the best possible protection for the horses and that the grounds at each track be policed at all times.

If the evidence of stimulation is conclusive a trainer shall be ruled off at once for life; otherwise a suspension is the punishment for a first offense with automatic banishment for a second.

Possession of narcotics by a trainer will draw the same punishment if the proposed law is passed at the national meeting at Miami.

The committee agreed upon the saliva test as the best method of determining whether a horse had been stimulated and included in its recommendation the Michigan rule forbidding the medication of a horse within 48 hours prior to a race.

If medicine must be administered in that period the horse must be scratched.

The question of open and closed claiming races was discussed at length but decision was deferred until the national meeting when the opinion of owners and trainers will be sought.

SHANLEY'S HAS 87-YEAR-OLD REGULAR

By Ed Cogswell

Strolling around the different alleys I found one bowler who asserts that Charley Richardson is simply a baby when it comes to claiming the old-age record. This was Daddy Cleveland, who has attained the age of 87 years, just 10 years more than Richardson can point to.

Daddy is a regular at Shanley's alleys, rolling three strings daily, and calls it his daily dozen. As Daddy doesn't roll in any league, he admits Richardson could qualify in Grade B, for the oldest league bowler, inasmuch as he is a regular with the Old-Timers' League.

The bowling girls are all enthused about a special match between Columbia Pictures and R. K. O. women's teams at the Metropolitan alleys next Friday evening. As each of the teams have a host of followers there is sure to be plenty of fun on the sidelines.

Three teams are having it hot and heavy in the Mystic Valley League. Reading has a lead of only a single point over Medford, while the latter is the same distance in front of Everett. Reading has the single team and three-string records to date in 579 and 1676.

Those boys from the hinterlands know their bowling . . . The veteran Sam Paige, is president of the league.

Terry Griffin, of the Park team in the City League at the 20th Century alleys, is the same old Terry who was the spark plug of Bill Beatty's Chauncys which was rated by many as the best five-man team ever assembled.

This reminds us that John Sullivan, of the same league, well rates as an old timer, being 73 years of age. John rolled anchor for the old Noddle team when Archie Walsh made his debut. Sullivan is retiring from the ferry service of the city . . . Another anchor of the early days of candlepins is Mike McNulty, of the Park team, which position he held with the Tom McCarthy five in the City League in 1910.

Miss Steuber of the First National Bank League in the last session was right after the pins, connecting for a string of 104; high string for the league. That Marketmen's League is a red hot combination, no less than four of the teams getting scores of over 1500 at the last meet. A. Pitts and Sanford rapped off strings of 135 with three-string totals of 360 and 341, respectively.

BROOKMEADE STABLE 'TOPS' IN WINNINGS

By Associated Press

New York, Dec. 12—For the third time in 11 years, the famous Whitney Eton blue and brown capped silks fail to head the list of money-winning owners on the American turf. Supplanted in 1925 by Samuel Riddle, and in 1928 by E. B. McLean the colors, carried by some of the country's greatest thoroughbreds yielded to the powerful Brookmeade Stable of Mrs. Dodge Sloane, headed by Cavalcade.

With Cavalcade, the leading money-winning horse of the year, earning $111,235, the well-balanced stable, trained by "Whistlin'" Bob Smith, won a total of $251,138.

WHITNEY BEATS WIDENER

C. V. Whitney, with Equipoise on the sidelines most of the season, had one of the leanest years in the 30-year history of his silks. He won only $169,520 and just managed to beat out J. E. Widener, who with Chance Sun taking the $100,000 Belmont Futurity and Peace Chance the $50,000 Belmont Stakes, pocketed $160,125.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree stable was the only other owner to pass the one-hundred thousand mark winning $110,835. E. R. Bradley, Mrs. John Hay Whitney and Charles T. Fisher, each of whom ranked high in 1933, finished down the list.

Although forced into second place this year, the Eton blue silks have dominated the American turf as few colors have since founded by W. C. Whitney, grandfather of C. V. Whitney, in the early part of the century.

Twelve times they have been at the head of the list. They began their last streak, with Harry Payne Whitney as master, in 1921 and ended the three-year reign of Harry F. Sinclair's Rancocas stable.

GREAT YEAR IN '31

The colors passed to C. V. Whitney upon the death of his father in 1930. With top flight traveling at high speed, the stable had its greatest year in 1931, winning $422,923 and came back the next year to account for $403,681 with Equipoise as the star. Last year the earnings dropped off to $241,194 while this year's figures exceeded those of three other years in the days when purses were not large.

The American record of $438,849 was established in 1923 by Rancocas with Zev sweeping all before him in national and international competition.

B. C. Runners Await New Saucer

Coach Jack Ryder and his courageous band of Eagle trackmen who daily brave the frigid blasts in their outdoor workouts, are eagerly awaiting the completion of the new 12-lap board track which is now under construction.

Barring the untimely intervention of a snow storm, the new track ought to be finished within a week.

This new oval will give current B. C. runners a much easier and better surface to train on than earlier heroes enjoyed.

This track will have banked corners, which will aid the present crop of tracksters to break some of the B. C. records.

Meanwhile, Captain Jugger Joyce and his mates are continuing to use the cinder track around Alumni Field. The new track will be located on the new field behind the Science Building.

SNORKY HEADS EPSOM DOWNS PROGRAM

By Dave Wilson

BEST BET—SNORKY

SNORKY, entered in a favorite's spot in the third race, looks like the safest wagering proposition on the card [illegible] carded for the Epsom Downs, Texas, track today.

FIRST RACE

Full Tilt, Proven, Gypsie Chief

FULL TILT is capable of winning [illegible] of this sort. PROVEN [illegible] the good [illegible] GYPSIE CHIEF, a [illegible] figures to hang on [illegible] the short end.

SECOND RACE

Flag Bearer, Even Play, Kai Finn

FLAG BEARER may make every pole a winning one. EVEN PLAY figures very dangerous on best form. KAI FINN for the rest of the spoils.

THIRD RACE

Snorky, Flashing Thru, Lord Tournament

SNORKY will have FLASHING THRU to drub for top honors. The latter belongs to the Debord stable. That outfit has been running in luck of late. LORD TOURNAMENT will be all-dangerous in the event of slop.

FOURTH RACE

Fredrick, Terrier, Miss Morocco

This is a tough race to figure FREDRICK, TERRIER and MISS MOROCCO all get good figures. They are fancied as named.

FIFTH RACE

Sweeping Light, The Pelican, My Dandy

That last race should put SWEEPING LIGHT right on edge. When right the Pelican is a first class performer. THE PELICAN shapes as better than MY DANDY. The latter has had quite a lot of it lately but I can't see anything beading him for the short end.

SIXTH RACE

Judge Judy, Lillian Z., Instigator

JUDGE JUDY appears to be a well placed thoroughbred. Looks like a question of a smooth ride. LILLIAN Z. figures to offer the contention. INSTIGATOR just missed last time.

SEVENTH RACE

Adobe Post, Bylona, Dunbar

ADOBE POST received a weird ride last out. That effort may be tossed into discard. BYLONA shapes up as the main danger. DUNBAR is entitled to some chance off his workouts.

EIGHTH RACE

Fingal, White Legs, Southard

FINGAL was never better and looks the best. WHITE LEGS and SOUTHARD are the main dangers. They are rated as named.

Wirtz Wins Tech 165-Pound Post

Elmer Wirtz has won the nomination to fight for the M. I. T. boxing team in the 165-pound class when the Beavers open with Harvard on Saturday night at the Harvard indoor gym.

The rugged middleweight has been striving against three other aspirants for the honor, and, after a final tapering off workout, Coach Rawson announced his selection.

High School Pals College Captains

With the election of Joseph F. O'Brien of Hyde Park as the captain of the 1935 Boston College football team there climaxed one of the most interesting parallel grid careers in local annals.

In 1930, Hyde Park High, coached by [illegible], had one of the best teams in its history. In addition to winning the district championship it was undefeated.

Several of the lads on the eleven were allscholastic selections, [illegible] Charlie Patrone. These two were the co-captains of the team and the two highly effective tackles.

Joe went to Boston College, and Charlie to [illegible] when this year Coach Joe McKenney made O'Brien [illegible].

[illegible] Patrone [illegible] leader for next year. Now the Gold and Maroon lettermen have picked O'Brien to perform a similar duty.

One step more remains to be accomplished before the grid careers of these two Hyde Park youth can be termed definitely alike. The accomplishment of this step would be of the greatest delight to Coach Joe McKenney as well as the coach of the Virginia college.

The last team which Joe and Charlie captained enjoyed a highly successful season, being undefeated and the champions in their district.

The happiest conclusion that could be put on this story will be the continuance of this success in their present captaincies.

B. C. Freshmen Drill on Pond

Herb Crimlisk, coach of the Boston College freshman hockey team, has had his large squad working out on Chandler's Pond, located on Lake street near the college.

The frosh will continue to supplement their indoor practice at the Arena with this outdoor practice as long as the weather permits.

In their first test on the Arena ice, the first year men did very well, taking a 1 to 0 decision from a fast New Prep sextet.

The frosh in all likelihood will engage the '38 teams of B. U., Brown, Northeastern, New Hampshire and M. I. T.

FUN AS 'LAWYER' PLANNED BY FRED ALLEN ON AIR

Objections over-ruled, and possibly a few of them actually arose when Fred Allen decided to make merry in the role of an attorney (WEEI) for his "Town Hall Tonight" comedy offering on the air waves this evening between 9 and 10 o'clock.

Fred Allen

Regardless the law it is that takes a [illegible], so to speak, when Allen and his broadcasting brigade get into action. Claiming to have absorbed an abbreviated course in legal profession [illegible], Fred figures that he is quite capable of [illegible] new shingle out and counsel with those in need of what he has (or has not) learned. Well, as his own program saying goes, its "Town Hall Tonight" and listeners have little to do but throw themselves on the mercy of his defense or prosecution technique, as the case may be.

PICKFORD PRESENTATION

Ahead of the Allen attraction, which appears to have things safely sewed up these Wednesday nights, so far as 9 o'clock is concerned, the play starring Mary Pickford (WEEI) on the stroke of 8 is "Mrs. Moonlight" which comes to the ether as an adaptation of the Broadway stage play that scored so sharply some four years ago.

Gracie, another of the Allen clan, has her network nonsense shaped along the life of a playwright (WNAC) this evening. George Burns is included of course, as always, only this time with almost fatal effect, according to confidential advance advices. Both are in Hollywood, from whence comes the half hour, although the Bobby Dolan musical doings originate in New York studios.

FAR FLUNG FEATURE

Plans for observing the Xmas holidays, as being made by the Byrd Expedition, come in for treatment in the weekly two-way transmission (WNAC) which links 10,000 miles, the distance between New York and the remote regions of Little America.

Jacques Renard is a merry maestro today, since his smooth dance orchestra group has just been signed up for a new series of [illegible] programs to be put over the Yankee Network facilities in these parts. It's a Friday night quarter hour, having the 8 to 8.15 place and will not be a studio show, but originate from within Cocoanut Grove walls where the lace troop is nightly engaged. Dick Landers, young collegiate baritone, and songstress Florence Case are likewise to take part as the vocal personalities.

Youngsters who enjoy the Sunday Advertiser comics broadcast of Uncle Bob (Ed Young) Houghton will have an opportunity to see him in person, when he appears at the charity program to be staged by the Roslindale Community Club at Roslindale Municipal building Saturday night at 7.30. Uncle Bob will bring with him the talented Foley family of Neponset, singers and dancers. Val Evans, magician, formerly with Ringling Brothers, will also be featured on the program.

This Ear— —That Air

By N. F. T.

Yesterday at noon there was a well attended meeting and luncheon upon Beacon street, in the [illegible] heights. Radio programs for kiddies, what the matter with them, suggestions as to how they may be improved and what [illegible] was the moving spirit throughout.

It was a Massachusetts Civic League affair. As stated, a goodly crowd was there. Dean Harvey [illegible] Holmes of the Harvard Graduate School of Education acted as toastmaster. Miss Rhoda Power, teacher of history for the British Broadcasting Corporation, was guest of honor and the principal speaker. Miss Power found no particular fault with our commercialized manner of catering to youngsters, yet she did most emphatically outline methods of procedure in effect over there. Verily, the contrast was decidedly apparent.

N. F. T.

Not desiring to state that their ideas or program planning for the little folk is one whit better than ours, it is quite in order to set forth the fact that in England the element of thrills, as in vogue on our shores, does give way to more high minded "mike" diversion, such as history, animal life, the wonders of nature and subjects calculated to stir the inspirational juvenile emotions. It was instructive, informative and equally interesting.

Head men of broadcastingdom in Boston were present, namely, John McNamara, the WBZ-WBZA program director; Charles Burton, superintendent at the WEEI sound studios and Roy L. Harlow, the Yankee Network chief. Then, of course, the air activity scribes representing our honored press fraternity. We were there. Much pro and con regarding the character of children's ether entertainment was expressed, looking toward the elimination of evils.

All of which methinks might be well summed up in the nutshell, granting that listening to radio is not unlike any other contemporary element or influence in the daily scheme of things for girls and boys.

There isn't much else to do but regulate radio indulgence by the kiddos, no matter how many meetings these well meaning grown folks attend.

When the beloved and respected Dad or Mother of this writer said "No" as red-blooded boyhood impulses appeared to go beyond established bounds—real discipline was exercised in our house. How vivid the recollection!

GOOD BUSINESS IN 1935 SEEN BY O'NEIL

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Frankly speaking, William O'Neil, president of the General Tire & Rubber Company thinks business will be better in 1935. Not because of what the politicians may do, but possibly in spite of them. One of the principal reasons for the cheerful outlook seen by Mr. O'Neil is the attention now paid to the problems and difficulties of smaller business enterprises. Size alone, the Ohio industrialist points out, is not a sin, but mass manufacturers should see to it that independent dealers are protected. This, he [illegible], for instance, make certain that mass distributors do not obtain their products at price differentials which permit competition on an unfair basis.

William O'Neil

A survey conducted by the United Business Service of Boston reveals a note of optimism among presidents of United States corporations. Asked 10 pertinent questions regarding the outlook for 1935 the answers in the majority indicated that 1935 business prospects were better than results in 1934. The majority also expect a rise in commodity prices, the employment of more workers, a better showing by consumer industries than by heavy industries, constructive action on the railroad problem, an expansion of credit and generally higher net earnings. Business optimists are professional optimists, some skeptics might say. But these men did not attain their present high positions by being wrong.

Shorts: Liquid Carbonic is given a boost in some advisory service letters . . . 25-27 is said to be the buying range . . . Du Pont had one of the better moves on the upside and is now ready for a decent shaking out . . . However, we have found it an unreliable actor on the downside and are none too sure that the indicated 92-94 will be reached . . . In general traders can expect some [illegible] issues that registered particularly well on the tape from the September lows.

The moment the reaction started going in earnest the fair weather friends of the bull cause started looking for an exit. The bull move was all over and they wanted to turn bearish. We can certainly lay claim to advising readers to steer clear of the industrials. But we are not going to do anything so foolish as to predict a wide open break. The industrials are entitled to a good correction. As a group we avoided them here because they moved 14 points on the hourly average without a single three-point reaction.

Notes: Yesterday [illegible] completed [illegible] correction and if [illegible] out to seven [illegible] more than normal [illegible] industrial index [illegible] to the 96-98 area . . . Another thing we want to caution about is the action of U. S. Steel . . . All this talk about [illegible] weakness in the issue is overdrawn . . . Think it over . . . Steel went from 31¼ to 39½ without a reaction of note . . . It has a right to react close to 35 . . . And possibly 34 . . . We add it to our hypothetical position on a dip into the 34-36 zone.

As far as our broad market policy is concerned there is no change. The rails held do not seem in any danger of matching reactions in the industrials and the specialty stocks mentioned here with accompanying price areas for buying appear to be not only safe but inviting to intermediate traders who refuse to permit temporary tape action to mold their market program. As we reported yesterday, the market seems destined to work irregularly higher and breathing spells are not to be taken as reversals of trend.

Traders Taken Aback By Decline Says Spectator

BY WALL STREET SPECTATOR

Wall street generally had been expecting a reaction, but was quite taken aback by the extent to which yesterday's setback went.

The way volume picked up toward the close was a contributing factor to the nervousness. Stocks though, have been pretty well on the up and up for nearly two months, so that the present decline shouldn't alter the picture if the [illegible]

It's curious that the heavy selling should come when business is beginning to show something.

The steel production rate is very satisfactory, considering the season; the auto industry is getting going, and rail traffic is picking up noticeably, thanks to the cold wave.

[illegible]

Then too the securities trading and securities registration rules are coming out soon, and may tighten things up a bit.

Settlement of the New Jersey gasoline price war came at the wrong time speculatively.

Normally this would have provided some lift to the oil shares, which have been one of the backward spots for quite a while . . . At any rate, it will help the outlook for next year . . .

Reports around are that Johns Manville's business in November was the best for this month since 1929; but this didn't prevent the early birds from taking their profits in the stock.

Grains Lower in Chicago Trading

Chicago, Dec. 12 (AP)—Feeling the effect of an apparent falling off in new purchase power, grain prices here tended downward today.

Prices Easy in Quiet Curb Dealings

By International News Service

New York, Dec. 12—The Curb Market continued to show an unsettled tone today, with rallying tendencies in a few issues offset by further softness in the rank and file of the speculative leaders.

Distillers Seagrams was heavily sold in the alcohol group, dropping almost a point to 13⅞ on the news that the Canadian government was seeking the heads of the company on fraud charges.

A mixed trend prevailed in the specialty group. Sherwin Williams, Babcock and Wilcox, and Greyhound were firmer, as against a 2 point dip in A. O. Smith to 26 and lesser declines in Carrier Corp. and Allied Mills.

Consolidated Gas of Baltimore was a firm spot in the utilities [illegible]

Steady Tone in Dull Bond Trading

By Associated Press

New York, Dec. 12—Bond trading was slow during the forenoon today, although the market had a somewhat steadier tone. Secondary rails were irregular, with the majority of price changes on the up side. U. S. Governments held to a narrow range.

An exception to the improvement in low-priced carrier bonds was Alleghany Corp. 5s of 1950, which were forced down a point to 54. Gains of around half a point accompanied trades in Erie 5s, which sold at 71, New York Central 5s at 64¾, Pennsylvania General 4½s at 104½, Northern Pacific 4s at 101¼.

There were like advances in International Telephone 5s at 62, Postal Telegraph 5s at 44½ and Texas Corp. at 103½.

Considerable number of transactions in Armour & Co. 4½s were closed around 102⅞, or a shade below yesterday's closing price.

Early dealings in the Federal brought gains of 1-32d to 3-32ds of a point in both series of Treasury 3s and in the 4s. Others of the list, including the guaranteed loans, were practically unchanged.

RECENT EVENTS SIGNIFICANT, SAYS FORBES

By B. C. FORBES

Is radicalism, is revolutionary agitation waning?

The answer would seem to be "Yes."

B. C. Forbes

Everybody admits that Franklin D. Roosevelt has been and is an expert politician, an expert diagnostician of public sentiment, an expert at adjusting his sails to prevailing winds.

Is it not significant, therefore that several months ago President Roosevelt began to draw away from his Socialistic advisers and to seek counsel with practical men of affairs?

Is it not significant that Upton Sinclair, who wanted to carry Socialistic experiments farther than Washington had proposed, was defeated?

Is it not significant that Huey Long lately has excited little but ridicule?

Is it not significant that Donald H. Richberg, formerly radical of radicals, now staunchly advocates relative conservatism?

Is it not significant that all talk of further tampering with the gold content of the dollar has subsided?

Is it not significant that silverites have practically ceased to demand further concessions?

Is it not significant that Washington now favors the drastic modification of NRA, especially its dictatorial and punitive features?

Is it not significant that labor leaders lately have refrained from perpetrating un-American actions in the belief that Washington would back them up?

Is it not significant that it is now admitted that governmental expenditures alone, no matter how lavish, cannot possibly insure the return of prosperity if the employing classes hold back because of acute apprehension?

Is it not significant that, since Washington became more conciliatory in its attitude towards industry, the government's credit has so improved that the new federal securities are greatly over-subscribed and our standing U. S. obligations have been soaring in market value?

Is it not significant that the new attitude of new dealers has been followed by arrestment of the general economic downswing and by substantial betterment in activity and in prices in many directions?

Is it not significant that since President Roosevelt and his advisers ceased moving towards the left and began to veer towards the center, sentiment nationally has become more hopeful?

Certainly, the results achieved thus far since President Roosevelt altered his course should encourage him—and encourage Congress—to refrain from fresh un-American excursions into the realm of experiment and to favor methods characteristically and historically American.

The Constitution, 'tis well said, seems to have withstood assault and battery so heroically that it promises to come into its own again.

This writer believes that, if President Roosevelt and Congress behave rationally, our business, our industrial, our social conditions are ripe for the early advent of impressive improvement.

A prediction: A month from now New Yorkers will accept the 2 per cent retail sales tax as a matter of course.

One reader, long established in the gasoline station business, complains that a grocery chain has taken on "oil, gasoline, tires and automobile accessories," and that a drug store chain now sells "luncheonettes, cigars, cigarettes, stationery, coffee pots and other hardware articles." He adds:

"It wouldn't be so bad if they would sell at legitimate prices, but having the financial strength to buy in carload lots, they undersell the small merchant. Hundreds of thousands of little business men are finding it impossible to earn a livelihood, thus swelling the ranks of those needing relief. The government should decree that every store must stick to its particular line of merchandise."

That may not be the remedy. But indisputable is it that the existence of a vast number of reasonably prosperous small business men would make for the permanent stability and social solidity of this commonwealth.

Dollar Higher at Close in London

London, Dec. 12 (AP)—The United States dollar gained ⅝ cent to the pound today, closing at 4.94 15-16 to the pound as compared with yesterday's close of 4.95 9-16. The opening quotation was 4.95 1-16.

The French franc closed at 75.06 to the pound as compared to yesterday's 75.18.

MARKET STEADY AT CLOSE OF TRADING

New York, Dec. 12—The stock market presented a steadier appearance today as the selling which hit the market at the close yesterday failed to carry over.

United States Steel and other industrial shares were only moderatey firm in ight trading. American Can moved up fractionally.

RAILS DRIFT

The better traffic figures failed to stimulate the rail shares to any fresh activity on the upside and the group merely drifted listelessly. Union Pacific sold down about a point on a small turnover.

Commonwealth & Southern was the most active spot in the utility shares with one block of 15,400 shares at 1⅛, unchanged appeared on the tape. Other power and light shares were quiet and steady.

Building shares continued in supply and the oils were heavy in the face of the news that the New Jersey gasoline price war had been ended.

Motor shares were firm at the start, but failed to carry through. United States Smelting was strong and about 2 points higher in the metal shares.

Farm equipment and mail order shares were easier, while specialties marked time.

URGES CO-OPERATION

The RFC head urged Wall Street to co-operate with recovery activities of the government and to quit fretting over each new activity in Washington.

In regard to the demand in banking quarters for curtailment of government spending, he said:

"If every purported plan by the head of some governmental agency that seems to threaten private business gives us a chill" there could be no recovery and consequently no cessation of government spending.

Regarding railroads, Chairman Jones warned that the government could not definitely shoulder the debts of roads that are not earning their fixed charges.

Wall Street is hopeful, however, that increased business and possibly a revision of rates will bring the carrier system generally back to a profitable basis, leaving but few reorganizations to be accomplished. The Burlington, which is controlled jointly by the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific, ordered a dividend of $1 against $2 six months ago. The lower payment had been anticipated in view of earnings.

Bright Outlook for Package Machine

Package Machinery Co. has declared a quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share on its common stock, payable December 1, as against 25 cents for preceding quarters during the last year.

Considerable improvement in business is reported for this quarter, with the company's increased engineering and drafting work beginning to bear fruit in sales and production. The year's business is expected to show a small gain over last year, and prospects for the future are reported better.

Boston Exchange Issues Ruling

Boston Stock Exchange authorities today made the following announcement:

Members are advised that when accepting Buy orders from customers it should be clearly understood at the time whether the transaction is to be a cash or margin one.

Cash transactions, which have a greater time allowance as to payment, may be changed to margin transactions only in exceptional cases.

Bucyrus-Monighan Co.

Bucyrus-Monighan Co. declared a dividend of 90 cents on the Class B stock, payable Jan. 2 to stock of record Dec. 20. Last dividend paid on the issue was 40 cents on Jan. 2, 1934.

Canadian Pacific Receipts

Gross traffic receipts of Canadian Pacific Railway during the first seven-day period in December totaled $2,611,000, against $2,412,000 in the like 1933 period.

COOK-COOS

by Ted Cook

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

News item says the film colony has taken up synthetic fox hunting. The hounds chase a fox fur which, after they have sniffed it, is dragged across country.

Of course a Hollywood hound would sniff at anything less expensive than chinchilla.

It might be more to the point to drag one of those scenarios over hill and dale.

What a cinch for the hounds!

In fact, there would be no need for hounds. Use mice.

(Classified Ad.—Position Wanted.)

MAN—YOUNG, UNRELIABLE, DIShonest, lazy, doesn't want position but needs one as clerk, chauffeur, laborer, etc. Short hrs. Big pay essential. Stew 8333.

* * *

Says Genevieve, the kitchen cynic—"Divorce may be a permanent problem; but it's just a temporary solution."

Triumph of mind over it doesn't matter—

BARRINGTON, N. J.—John Harris was fined $10 here for driving a truck which was minus tail light, springs, brakes, exhaust pipe, hood, headlights, fan belt, flooring, mirror, and had a tomato-can carburetor and only three tires.

* * *

Anyway, politicians with something to prove always prove they don't care how they prove it.

Q. and A. DEPARTMENT

What would you say of the spirit of the times, dear sympathetic Aunt Bella? Interested.

Ans.—Too much of it was distilled in the summer of 1934.

A. ("Like a Flash") Bella.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN SWAMI

"Life is too complicated. Fighting frustration, people become too concentrated upon themselves—they see and think of nothing else. That is what is wrong with moderns."—J. Oliver Ives, Psycho-Analyst.

* * *

I wish I never thought of me;
How simple everything would be
If one would never sigh
Concerning I.
When hungry, for example, I brood
Concerning food.
Why not let the Chinese nation
Worry about starvation?
I fret more than I should, I suppose
Concerning clothes;
Logic tells me that the proper answer
Is to permit the fanning dancer
(Who receives ample payment)
To worry about raiment;
Likewise, concerning shelter—I fret
About next month's rent, and yet
Far better it would be for me
To let the landlord see that he Is the unlucky guy—
Not I.

A Sound Warning

Communism's Peril Noted by Boston College Professor

THE Rev. Jones I. Corrigan, S. J., professor of social ethics at Boston College, sounds a timely warning.

"The atheistic teachings in our colleges and schools," he says, "are doing immense harm to the minds of our young people, while the appearance of Communistic groups even in our high schools shows how far the virus of Communism has already penetrated."

Father Corrigan declares that Europe is aflame at both ends—in Russia and in Spain.

He notes that America is flanked with Communism in Mexico and a "deep-seated movement in Canada."

We will heed the warning with a united front, for surely we do not wish to see duplicated in America the picture presented by Communism in Russia.

There, as William Randolph Hearst this week pointed out editorially:

"It is the same old Russia as under the czars. It is the same old tyranny under a different name."

The Revolution of 1934

Against King Crime

Jack Lait, ace crime reporter, is covering the National Conference on Crime at Washington for the Hearst newspapers.

If you want to know what crime costs YOU, and what must be done to stamp it out, read his dispatches.

As a sample, Mr. Lait says:

"Not a pound of ice or a quart of milk or a loaf of bread or a yard of cloth or a pair of shoes can be delivered before the racketeer has taken his tax.

"Not a brick can be laid, not a tire can be replaced, not a cigarette can be lighted before the racketeer has taken his tax.

"Not a can of ashes can be removed, not a street can be flushed, not a bobbed head can be marcelled, before the racketeer has taken his tax."

Every year the nation pays, for racketeering and other crimes, between TWELVE THOUSAND MILLION AND EIGHTEEN THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS, AND EVERY FORTY MINUTES SOME AMERICAN PAYS FOR THEM WITH HIS LIFE.

Time something was done about this, you think?

President Roosevelt thinks so, too.

That is why he has called this conference, to map a nationwide campaign against the crime army, to smash its forces, and to sweep it out.

As an American citizen, you owe it to yourself to keep informed of this war.

It is a new "War of Independence"—a revolt of the law-abiding majority against the criminal minority. It is no less important to the average man than America's revolt against foreign oppression a century and a half ago.

Here's a Fine Idea!

Bring on Periscopes

Here's a fine idea from abroad. When the Duke and Duchess of Kent rode through London in the royal wedding party, an enterprising young man rented periscopes to bystanders behind the front lines.

We could use periscopes in Boston. They would enable us to see the street parades.

They would come in handy, for example, over in "Southy" the 17th of March.

Or when the Marathon runners gasp their way through the finish tape in April.

Bring on your periscopes!

The short fellows can at last get a break!

Saving Army Base

A Necessary Project

Saving the Boston Army Base, long advocated by the Boston American, is finally to be accomplished.

This $896,000 Federal project, at last approved by Public Works Administrator Ickes, differs distinctly from many upon which Uncle Sam is engaged.

In the first place, the Government is saving its own investment. What property owner would hesitate about saving a house from destruction when a new foundation or other repairs became imperative?

In the second place, this project, so far as new money put into it goes, can be made to do a great deal better than pay for itself.

And it will give needed work to hundreds of our citizens.

Faith in America

Grows Stronger Every Day

"You and I must have faith in our government," declared United States Senator Patrick A. McCarran of Nevada, addressing the Clover Club in Boston.

He called for "a faith that this government under God shall not crumble."

This is sound advice for those who need it. But we believe that nearly everyone in this country today realizes he is indeed fortunate to be here.

The news from war-menaced nations overseas is NOT inspiring. It does not fill anyone with a desire to get from under the sheltering wings of the good old American Eagle.

Our faith in America grows stronger every day.

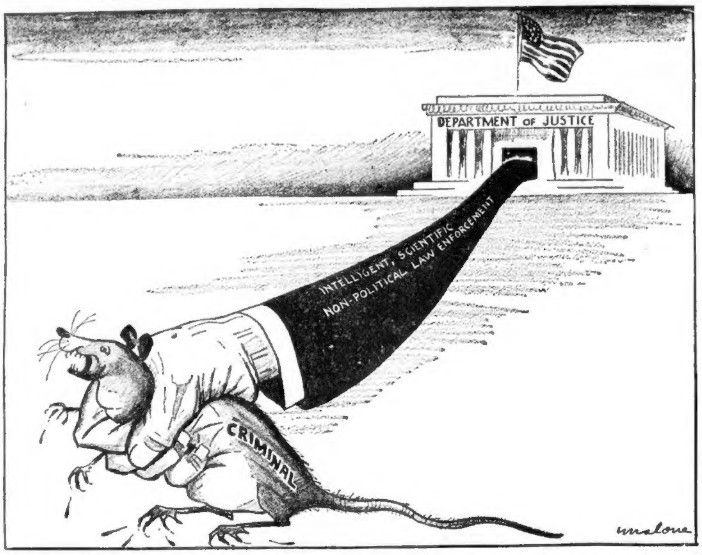
—Ephesians iv, 22.
By the Rev. Arthur B. Papineau, Grace Church, Vineyard Haven.

A LONG ARM SHOWS THE WAY!



DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE
INTELLIGENT, SCIENTIFIC NON-POLITICAL LAW ENFORCEMENT CRIMINAL
umalone

Beginning its sessions with the President's address, the National Crime Conference at Washington brings to the fore a new outlook toward solving the disgraceful American crime problem.

In effect, the Federal Government asserts its right and its obligation to lead the nationwide war that must be waged against crime and corruption.

And what this may mean has been well indicated by the recent activities of the United States Department of Justice.

Operating with limited authority, with a meager force of men and still more meager funds, the department has proved that laws can be enforced and criminals can be brought to justice.

The National Crime Conference is expected to lay down a complete and thorough program for co-ordinated Federal, State and local action.

Public opinion is solidly behind the Federal Government in its laudable endeavor.

And every other unit of government must do its full share!

Listen, World! :-: :-: By Elsie Robinson

LIFE BEGINS . . . ANY DAY!

What a gallant old creature she was, standing there, with the wind squalling and the waves mauling till you thought each heave of the rotten little tug would be its last. Yet, each time it righted, up she came, blinded, choking, with the water streaming from her battered oilcloth, but the grand body beneath it unshaken.

Elsie Robinson

And why not? What was one storm to her—or a dozen? She'd weathered 50 years of them—wilder nights, angrier surf than Lewis Bayer ever imagined.

Some crueler force than the salt scud which blew over the ancient "Narcissus" had scoured caution into those kindly eyes, changed the slant of that big, laughing mouth—given her the courage to stand there, booming her defiance into the teeth of the gale.

STILL HERSELF

Yet always she'd come through, unbeaten, still HERSELF—still that Leila von Koerber whom the world was to know as Marie Dressler.

You're remembering now, aren't you? Smiling through tears as you do! That immortal pair—"Min and Bill"—Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery—what grand things they did in that play—what grand things they did to your heart! Sent you home feeling you could lick your weight in wild cats. And no wonder. She had!

There's the record of it all now in "My Own Story"—published by Little, Brown & Co.—just as she told it to Mildred Harrington. Such a record! She'd never tell it in life, for fear folks would think she was whimpering.

Every handicap, every hell a human can know. And, capping it all, cruelest of all, those 15 dreadful years when the world forgot her entirely.

Yet always she came out on top. Shelved at 40. Destitute, down to her last cent at 55, with hardly a dozen people who remembered she'd once been a great comedy queen. Yet, at 62, once more the beloved toast of America. How did she do it? She tells in that story.

DONE BY BELIEF

SHE DID IT BY ALWAYS BELIEVING IN HERSELF AND HER RIGHT TO HAPPINESS.

Not just a legal RIGHT—a BIRTH RIGHT. Always she believed that she was MEANT to have a grand time—and give it to others. Poverty? Heartbreak? Years? These were accidents. They had, she felt, nothing to do with the natural scheme of things.

No matter what happened, A WOMAN WASN'T DOWN AND OUT UNTIL SHE THOUGHT SHE WAS. And Marie Dressler never thought she was.

"Life begins at forty? No!"—she cried.

"I, who know, tell you that life can begin at fifty—at sixty. It can begin the day before you die, if on that day you learn something that gives you a fresh vision of beauty or service."

And then there's this, that every discouraged woman over forty should be forced to read—

"It makes me positively ill to see you women who have raised your children settle back and fold your hands in your empty laps. Instead of thinking that the world has ended for you, you should feel that it is beginning . . . Not every middle-aged woman can fill her life with acting or music, but she can fill it with something absorbing and vitalizing if she tries hard enough."

Fill your life with—SOMETHING! If you can't write a best seller—cook the best sponge cake, plant the best tulips, be the best listener, the gayest giver, the grandest human on the block. Believe in yourself. Believe you're a wow. Believe that nothing can lick you. AND NOTHING CAN!

Secret of Happiness -:- -:- By Winifred Black

The little woman in the plain hat and the not too expensive frock was having the time of her life at the picnic.

Winifred Black

It was a late autumn picnic, and for my part, that's the best kind of picnic in all the world.

You can all have your June, July and August picnics with the mosquitoes and the flies and the midges and everybody drinking themselves sick with cold lemonade or this, that and the other, and chocolate cake and lemon pie and sandwiches and stuffed olives, and all the rest of the picnic trash.

I'll take my picnic in October or November, thank you, and build a nice, neat, little fire of dry sticks between two good big stones and set an old fashioned tin coffee pot on one end of the fire and a frying pan on the other the end, and I'll fry a pan full of bacon crisp—and take a few good strong willow sticks and broil the chops over the fire and spread a tablecloth on the ground and sit down in the bright autumn sunshine that always makes me think of a good friend waving me a gay farewell for a little while—and begin to live.

BLUE JAY PROTESTS

Well, this is the kind of picnic the little woman in the plain hat and the not too expensive frock was enjoying.

The fragrance of the coffee and the delicious smell of the bacon brought all kinds of little wood creatures out.

One bossy blue jay protested vigorously at the invasion of his realm.

And the little woman I speak of, was the first to see the gophers and the chipmunks and the first to throw them a crumb or so, and she knew just exactly what the blue jay was saying.

And she laughed so hard she could scarcely speak, but would she tell us what he said?

Not she. She declared it wouldn't be proper.

And I looked at her, and my heart sang with pride and melted with admiring affection.

For not so very long ago, this little woman had a beautiful home and a devoted husband and two lovely children, and there was money for travel and for entertaining, and everything.

LIVES IN PRESENT

And then suddenly her husband died and the money went wrong, and the little daughter ran away with a stranger and went to live somewhere south of the isthmus, and the boy was drowned and here she is, poor and alone—but does she feel poor?

Not she.

She just lives from one minute to the next without letting herself think of the past or of the future, and she lives on just exactly $40 a month. She makes a budget and keeps within that budget; and she goes to the park and for long walks in the crowded districts, and she reads all the new books that come into the public library, and once in a while she goes without a few luncheons and gives hereself a treat at a new picture.

I saw a very rich woman looking at her at the picnic and her eyes were full of contemptuous wonder.

And yet, the rich woman is never well, or never happy, or never even contented.

Happiness or misery—we seem to bring these things into the world with us in our cradles, do we not?

LUCKY DOG

My doctor says to me:
"Since your age is fifty-three,
Very careful with your diet
It becomes you now to be.
You have reached the dangerous stage,
Best described as middle age,
When you ought to pick your dinner

"You're expanding round the waist
With a trifle too much haste,
Which is due to eating dishes
That are pleasant to the taste.
If it's spicy, if it's sweet,
Once again let me repeat,
You will find it is forbidden
By this neatly printed sheet."

So I'm done with cake and pie,
And to meat I've said goodbye,
Everything my palate craves for
I must now myself deny.
"Lucky dog!" I say to Mark,
"You can eat from dawn to dark
And you haven't any doctor
To command you not to bark.

"Lucky dog, you do not know
What of acids to forego,
For it's only man, I fancy,
Who was born to suffer so!
You're a dog and you can eat
What you find of bread and meat,
And you do not have to bother
With a doctor's diet sheet."

Old Age Security Views Change

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Metchnikoff, the biologist, didn't take much stock in the Biblical story of Methuselah and Noah being nearly one thousand years old. He did say, however, that it was quite possible that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob attained their recorded ages of 175, 190 and 147 years respectively.

In that connection, he said men would live much longer as they learned more about taking care of themselves.

That is already happening. And with this event there comes what appears to be the first joint move, by both public and private agencies, to provide old age security.

CORPORATIONS PLAN

Following quickly on the news that the great General Foods Corporation has evolved a plan of old age retirement incomes, is the announcement of a similar plan being prepared by the Liquid Carbonic Corporation. Both appear against a background of governmental planning and action.

Old age is a lot more worth living now than it used to be, if one is provided for and still has his wits, and no longer will we "die of disappointment," as Buffon puts it.

Science is ready to make life good to the last drop if that maverick science known as economics can be prodded into doing its part.

HANDED THE HEMLOCK

It has taken many long, bleak centuries for this sense of responsibility for the aged to get a toe-hold in the social heritage. The ancient Greek law of Ceos was that "He who cannot live well at sixty shall not live ill." They handed the sexagenarian a hemlock cup. The Romans used to throw old people off the bridge, Pons Publicus, into the Tiber.

Abandonment of the aged, and occasionally their brutal destruction, appears in the early history of virtually all peoples, including our own Indo-European stock.

The American Indians, especially the Hurons, were particularly cruel in killing old men and women, or leaving them to starve or freeze. So were African savages. In Persia and Armenia, they did accord the unhappy old people a bit of ceremony when they turned them out to die, but little else.

Best of all were the primitive savages of Central Australia. A clan would store food for its aged members and assign hunters to provide for them.

A large number of corporations are setting research staffs to work and weighing their resources for old-age retirement plans.

We see in this, with the government activities at Washington, an inevitable adaptation to technology, with machines displacing men, the falling birth rate, with no large families to care for the aged, the insecurity of investment where some new invention may invalidate bonds held for old age.

The fact is that we are a lot more decent and humane than when we used to turn old people out to die—and that's progress.

Hendrik Van Loon

WRITES ABOUT

Our Knowing Europe

Some eighty years ago somebody wrote an article on "a certain condescension on the part of foreigners towards Americans."

Hendrik VanLoon

I forget who it was, and it may have been ninety years ago for all I know, but that "certain condescension on the part of foreigners towards Americans" still continues, and it has rarely manifested itself in a more naive form than in the announcement given to the press by the Yugo-Slavian consul in New York about the expulsion of twenty-seven thousand Hungarians from Yugo-Slavia.

NONE OF OUR BUSINESS

Let me state at the outset that I consider the affairs of Yugo-Slavia none of our business. The whole of the Balkans are not worth the bones of a single Vermont farmer as far as I am concerned, and never have been. Now that the whole of Europe is gradually becoming "Balkanized," the same goes for the rest of the ancient continent.

If it wants to commit suicide and destroy itself by repeating the idiocies and mistakes of the past, I suppose that it has as good a right to do so as any other group of nations or individuals.

Meanwhile, if we are wise, we shall sit here and keep our powder dry and benefit by the inrush of musicians and artists and scientists who, being less apt to be victims of Europe's affliction of nationalism, feel they have something better to give to the world than murder committed in the name of grammar.

WE KNOW NOW

But to return to our Yugo-Slavian friend of the consulate. Does that gentleman, in his artful way, really believe us to be as simple as he pretends to do?

And does he think that in the year 1934, sixteen years after the obscene propagandistic fraud of the Great War, there still are Americans left to say:

"Why, if the consul says so, it is undoubtedly true, for he speaks for his government; and of course we would never doubt the word of an official spokesman, with all the authority of the state behind him?"

It is true that before the war, when Europe was very far away indeed, we were often woefully misinformed about the true state of affairs over there.

We have learned our lesson, at the expense of thousands of lives that will never come back and billions of dollars worth of property that we had better forget.

EUROPE IN 1935

To assume now that there are certain mysterious details connected with the struggle between the Hungarians and the Yugo-slavians, and that we need the enlightenment of some official mouthpiece in either New York or Washington, speaking with disdainful aloofness about certain erroneous statements that have been foisted upon the American public—that, my friends, ceases to be funny.

It becomes out and out offensive. It is an insult to our common sense and national intelligence.

Europe will undoubtedly continue the uneven tenor of its ways.

The next year will undoubtedly see a repetition of the wholesale massacres, purges, the inhuman forcible migrations of tens of thousands of people, the highfalutin' speeches of seventh rate leaders and the general hunger and misery which have been so characteristic of the past twelve months.

Being human, we shall think our own thoughts about these things. But we intend to make up our mind about Europe without the kind co-operation of the official European spokesman.

Isn't It So?

An ounce of possession is worth a pound of profession.

A man is not licked because he has lost his shirt. Just look at Ghandi!

When the horse was on the road in former years he had more horse sense than many auto drivers today.

Husbands speak much more boldly behind a newspaper they are trying to read than face to face. Newspapers encourage freedom of speech.
